INTRODUCTION.

When Dr. Ebenezer Alden, who prepared and published the genealogy of the descendants of John Alden, wrote the introduction to his book, he made use of the following remarks as to genealogy :

“Genealogy is family history ; to some a chaos of isolated facts, very dry ; to others, facts revealing principles, laws, methods of the divine government.”

“Genealogy has its lessons for such as will study them ; uses for such as can appreciate and interpret them. The family precedes the state. Love of kindred underlies true patriotism.”

In the compiling of the genealogy and history of the descendants of Thomas Durfee, the first emigrant known by that name who came to America before 1664, I have confined myself to such accepted and authentic statistics as I have found in the Congressional Library and the library of the War Department ; and it is hardly necessary to state how many volumes were searched in order to gather the data for this record ; but I will say this, that the information obtained required months of careful study and searching volume after volume in the hours not employed in official duties.

Through correspondence with living descendants of the Durfees in the United States and Europe, I have been greatly aided, especially through the kind assistance of Walter C. Durfee, Esq., of Fall River, Mass., who has done more than anyone else in furnishing me with information for this genealogy, and more especially for the branch descending from Benjamin Durfee, the fifth son of the emigrant Thomas.

My aunt, Mrs. Mary A. Manchester, of Tiverton, R. I., has also been wonderfully patient with my perpetual wanting to know this or that.

I hesitate to record the reason why I became so interested in this work, for the reader might not see, after all, any use in so much expended energy ; but at the bottom of all, when I look into my own heart, I believe it was prompted by a love for my dear departed mother, a reverence for all whose name she bore, as well as the duty I felt incumbent on me to leave for my children, a record of their ancestors. For, without this exhaustive search and study which I have made, I would have left to them a very difficult problem to solve as to my (or their) genealogy. In my searching I have found that to all appearances many of the descendants of the Durfee family, for want of record, have lost their relationship in lineal descent from the first person by the name of Durfee, in America, without the loss of the name.

The commandment of the Lord, "Honor thy father, and thy mother," etc., has often been in my thoughts while I have passed the time in collecting these records, and I have often regretted that I could not find names written in the records I have examined that would have brought into this record many unknown descendants, all because of the indifference of people who lived one hundred and fifty years ago. It is difficult now to place a family without record, in a position to be socially benefited, through the honorable record of their Revolutionary ancestors. I have endeavored, as far as possible, to bring into this record an account that will not fail as to the family relationship of the Durfees that served in the Civil War of 1861, so that when a hundred years shall have passed away, the descendants of those who took part in saving our Union of States will know that among the men who preserved the best Government the world has ever known were their ancestors ; because their names are given in the genealogy with the history of the service rendered.

The record of descendants that served in the Union army, and a few that assisted the Confederacy, will appear for the most part in a succeeding volume.

THE ORIGIN OF THE DURFEE NAME.

IN TWO PARTS.

BY WINTHROP C. DURFEE,

OF

BOSTON, MASS.

PART FIRST.

The significance and origin of surnames has always been a matter of great interest, and doubly so is the origin of a name to those who bear it.

Names indicate locality, occupations, station in life, nationality, and are often the only survivals of ancient titles, or all that is left to indicate some obsolete custom. In themselves, by their significance in some old forgotten dialect, they illumine some obscure page of history.

The name Durfee is unique. Very ancient in its origin it has to-day its only representatives in America.

Previous to the year 1628 it was unknown in England, and ceased to be recorded in 1723.

A careful search of all available printed English records fails to show the name of Durfee in any, with the exception of those that refer to Thomas D'Urfey, or Durfee, the English dramatist, who was born in 1653 and died in 1723. These English records are of three classes:

1st. The various polls of names connected with army and navy from the earliest times, and with civil government positions; lists of titled personages from highest title to the minor gentry; also various court records and proceedings, especially wills and probate.

2d. Parish registers of births, marriages, and deaths.

3d. Lists which have been made from the first two and possibly other sources by historians and students of names. A number of such lists have been printed from the time of the Domesday Book down to the most recent researches. Probably one of the most complete of these books is a record of native English, Scotch, and Irish names, combined with those derived from French and German or other foreign surnames.

The English parish lists, including all of the parishes of London and Canterbury, and about one hundred records of other families have been searched.

If the name of Durfee did not appear in London and Canterbury parish records for a period of 350 years, it is safe to assume that the name is not general in Great Britain. Aside from Thomas Durfee, the dramatist, 1653-1723, already mentioned, the following are the only similitudes to the name of Durfee found in printed English records available for inspection :

Parish of St. Martin's in the Fields: April 21, 1556, Isod Urfu baptized. May 27, 1554, Margeria Urfu buried. August 25, 1555, Jaanes Peart and Agnete Urfue married. September 9, 1556, Antomus Urfue buried. June 11, 1553, Luthretimus Dudley and Elizah Urfue married.

Record of York Wills: January 12, 1558, Thomas Dursay (also written Durfay). January 11, 1562, Robert Durssa (or Dursay). May 10, 1605, James Dursey. October 1, 1593, John Dursey.

It will here be noted that the will of Thomas Dursay, of 1558, is the only one where spelling is possibly Durfay, and that the later wills are all Dursey, showing that the f was really the long s, and the name is not Durfee, but more probably our modern Dorsey.

On August 20, 1683, William Dorfe, mariner, was witness to a marriage of Thomas Cliffe and Margariet Harvey, of Deal, at Boston, Lincolnshire, England (see Canterbury marriage licenses). As a search for this name of Durfee has included a conscientious search for all words which sound like Durfee, or of which Durfee might be a variant, without any greater success, it is safe to assume that the name is unique in itself, and the fact that at the time Thomas Durfee, of Portsmouth, R. I., arrived in America, at the age of 17, there was residing in England a family named Durfee, who also used the only variation of Durfee, Durfey, which was used by this Thomas Durfee, would indicate that there was some close connection between the two families.

Thomas D'Urfev, the dramatist, of England, born 1653, and died 1723, spelled his name with the D', but Huguenot writers, at about 1680-90, spelled it Durfée.

Sometime before 1628, the exact year not being known, a French refugee named d'Urfé, fled from Rochelle, France, to England, bringing with him a son.

This son grew up and married Frances Marmion, of Huntingdonsire, and Thomas D'Urfev was born of this marriage in 1653.

In the year 1647 one Loerin d'Urfev was assisted at Dover by the Huguenot Church to go on his way.

The record is to be found in the publications of the London Huguenot Society.

Thomas Durfey, the English dramatist, was born in 1653, at Exeter, Eng., and it was from Exeter, Eng., and its vicinity, that many of the first settlers of Rhode Island came.

Thomas Durfee, the ancestor of the Durfee family in America, was born in 1643, just 10 years before the English dramatist of the same name, and came to America in 1660, when his English namesake was but 7 years old.

The absolute identity of name, christian name, and spelling of surname, together with the fact that young Durfee, the emigrant, came directly to a colony where Exeter people lived, that he was well received, and that his children married into the Earle and Freeborn families, shows that he was not entirely without credentials of some sort.

Between 1680 and 1690 Thomas Durfee, the English dramatist, wrote a short satirical poem on New England customs, indicating that the dramatist had visited New England, and, not satisfied with conditions here, had returned to England. This poem may be found in Vol. IX of the N. E. Genealogical Register, and is quite interesting reading.

If Thomas Durfee, the dramatist, visited New England, it adds to the evidence of some relationship existing between the two Thomas Durfees.

To what extent this evidence is decisive, or weighs, each must decide for himself; but the fact remains that in Exeter, England, in the family of a French refugee, is the only record where we find the name of Durfee absolutely identical with our own.

We know that from 1660 to 1901 the name has been spelled Durfee without variation, except occasionally Durfey or Durffee (or Durphey), but always in a way not affecting the pronunciation, and there is no reason why it should have changed more suddenly in England to an unrecognizable form.

Two other facts give weight to the Huguenot origin of the name:

1st. A Mrs. Lathrop, moving from Norwich, Conn., to Providence, R. I., probably about 1830, told Walter C. Durfee, now 85 years of age, then a young lad, that her father's name was Durfey, and that they were of Huguenot descent. It is probable that this Mrs. Lathrop's father was a direct descendant of Thomas Durfee, of Portsmouth, R. I., through (grand) sons who moved to Connecticut, and that the tradition was understood in that branch of the family moving into a colony more given to aristocratic ideas than among those who remained in the Quaker surroundings of Portsmouth, R. I.

2d. General de Lafayette visited the Hon. Thomas Durfee at Fall River, Mass., and took a great interest in him, sending him, after he returned to France, a gift of two French greyhounds.

There appears a reason for this which is not entirely explained by the well-known patriotism and personal worth of the Hon. Thomas Durfee, in the fact that one of Lafayette's aides, Rochefoucauld, was the bearer of the French d'Urfe arms and titles.

This all leads to the origin of the d'Urfe name and family in France.

PART SECOND.

THE ORIGIN OF THE (DURFEE) D'URFE NAME IN FRANCE.

Thomas D'Urfey, the English dramatist, claimed to be nephew of Honoré d'Urfé, a noted French poet, who lived 1565-1625, and he is also stated to have been a nephew of a minister of the Court of France. It is, however, probable that he was a grandnephew, rather than nephew, as we use the term.

The fact is interesting, however, as we have a fine biographical record of Honoré d'Urfé, which gives authoritatively a history of the d'Urfé family in France.

In part, the biographer is so lost in the glories of the d'Urfé family that much of his book is given up to history and leaves little room for biography.

This biography takes much of its history from a book called "Origin des Urfe," by M. Augusta J. Barnard, custodian of the historical documents of France, and from a d'Urfe genealogy, written about the year 1300, by Anne d'Urfe, count of Forez.

The d'Urfe family goes back to a record of about 590, A. D. Its founder was Henry, Duke of Bavaria, and its name of d'Urfe originates in a tradition attached to his family.

The tradition is evidently "folk-lore," and that it has become definitely attached to a certain family is evidence of the ancient origin of the family itself.

The name d'Urfe, as will be seen later, is but the French variation of Wlph, the early German form of Wolf and Guelph, both famous families in Europe. Judith Wlph married Louis I, of France (Ludwig I, of Germany), son of Charlemagne.

Charlotte M. Yonge's History of Germany gives the Wlph tradition in connection with Ludwig I, who married Judith; but perhaps a more interesting one to those of the Durfee name will be found in a direct translation from the biography of Honoré d'Urfé, a book in the Boston Public Library, as follows:

"If we can believe the legends collected by some historians, the house of d'Urfe would be not only one of the most honored families of France; it would be also one of the most ancient.

"Andre Duchesne tells us in his history of Burgundy that towards the year 610, under the reign of the King of Orleans, Theodoric, grandson of Sigebirt and Brunhaut, a Wlphe, was patrician of Trans-Jurane, Burgundy.

"Now, this name of Wlph later became d'Urfe, undergoing successive modifications, of which history kept the record. About the middle of the 12th century, Wlph, the Valiant, changed it to d'Ulphe, or d'Ulphen, or d'Ulpheur. It was only at the end of the 16th century that Peter the II wrote it with the spelling that has not since varied. (Peter II died 1508, this should be end of 15th century.)

"The alterations which this name has undergone are easily explained. They come principally from the uncertainty of Latin translations that have been made of them in titles and charters. According to this same Duchesne, the house of d'Urfé takes its origin from the Count Wlphe, whom the chroniclers of Low Countrie call the Duke of Baviere, and whose daughter Judith became the wife of Louis Debonnaire. It is from this Duke, or Count, that Conrad, Count of Paris, and Bozon, King of Burgoyne, descend.

"The d'Urfés trace back their origin as far as this royal family. They quote with pride a Wlph surname, 'the Robust,' who added to the brilliancy of his nobility the glory of having fought bravely against the Turks at the siege of Antioch, 1098. As a reward for his brave action, Wlph received for himself and for his posterity, from the assembly of Christian Princes, the coat of arms blazoned 'de vair' au chef Gules, which has since been that of the house of d'Urfe.

"According to a charter in the 'Proofs of the History of the Counts of Forez,' this family was already established at the end of the 11th century in the province, of which it became one of the greatest glories.

* * * * *

"According to a genealogy written by the orders of Anne d'Urfe and annotated by his hand, Hirmatride, wife of Isambert Wlphe, who lived at the end of the 8th century, having given birth at once to twelve children, feared in her ignorance that her husband would accuse her of infidelity. On this account, keeping one of them, she ordered one of her servants to throw the others into the river. Isambert, who was hunting, meeting the servant, asked him what he was carrying and what he was doing in that place. The latter, frightened, replied that he was carrying a batch of wolf cubs which a wolf which he was caring for at his house had just brought forth, and that he wished to drown part of them. The servant having showed him the eleven new-born babies, Isambert suspected the fear of his wife, of whose fidelity he was certain. He had these eleven children brought up with care, unknown to Hirmatride, and six years after he had them all dressed alike and presented them to his wife, asking her if she recognized these Wlphe, which signifies in German, wolves. Hirmatride, at the sight of these children, threw herself at the knees of her husband asking pardon. The latter hastened to praise her and told her that she had been pardoned long ago.

“ In the year 1127, Wlphe, surnamed the brave, accompanied Louis the fat in the journey that the king made into Auvergne to calm the troubles excited by the Count of Cleremont. On returning from this expedition, Wlph stopped at Montbrison (in Forez, near Lyons), where he was so taken with the beauty and virtues of a cousin of Guy I, Count of Forez, named Airnie, that he asked her in marriage and obtained the consent of her parents.

“ Wlph established himself in the country of his wife and had a castle, which he called by his name, built on a high hill, and to give to this name an appearance less German, he curtailed the W and accented the last syllable. Wlph, the Valiant, was thus the first Lord d’Ulphé.

“ The patronymic name of Wlph appears to have been Raimbé or Reybi, which one often finds in charters with some variations in spelling.

“ The family of d’Urfé was not long in obtaining in the province where it was established all the consideration that courage, virtue, and noble employment of authority can give. But its glory increased principally when the Count de Forez passed to the house of Borbon. Gurchard d'Ulfhe became the friend and confident of Louis II, Duke of Borbon and Count of Forez, who named him Captain of Roannais, and then bailiff of all the country."

It would be too long a history to enumerate all the honors that came to the house of d'Urfe until 1724, when it parted of male issue. Its record was famous in the history of France of the middle ages; so much so that in 1724, when the name failed of direct heirs, a younger branch of the house of Rochefoucauld, descendants of the d'Urfé on the female line, took up the arms and name of d'Urfe as a great honor, and the last representative of this line of Rochefoucauld was an aid to Lafayette in our War of the Revolution.

Montbrison is in the south of France, north of Lyons, and the chateau d'Urfe is now standing, or was quite recently. It is on a very high hill visible for several miles, and two old towers of great massiveness are called Cornu d'Urfe, or Horns of Urfé.

The Durfees were first Knights, holding lands and owing fealty to the Count of Forez, later Counts of Forez, and still later, by fortunate marriages, one became a marquis, and the title became a very complicated affair. Honors and wealth and power of princely nature came to them. The first d'Urfe won his spurs in the first crusade; another was Grand Master of the Knights Templars at Malta; another Envoy to Rome; another commanded the French in war against Italy. But to translate again and quote from the French author:

"Nothing was lacking to the glory of the d'Urfé family. The mysterious grandeur of its origin; the brilliancy of the alliances which it had made; the immense wealth which it possessed; the favor which it enjoyed with the kings, all seemed to unite to make it the first family of Forez and one of the most noble houses of France. However, Jacques d'Urfé added still to its celebrity by his marriage with Rene de Savoie, granddaughter of Anne de Lasearis, whose father, Jean Antoine de Lasearis, was the oldest son of Honoret de Lasearis arm Vintimille.

THE AUTHORITY FOR THE ABOVE COAT OF ARMS MAY BE FOUND IN RIESTRUP'S ARMORIAL GENERAL, VOL. 2, 1887.

THE COAT OF ARMS HERE SHOWN IS THAT OF A MARQUIS D'URTE, 1612, THE HELMET DESIGNATING BY ITS FACING FRONT THE TITLE OF MARQUIS. THE SHIELD TO THE SAME IS THAT GRANTED OVER 500 YEARS EARLIER AT ANTIOCH IN THE FIRST CRUSADE BY THE ASSEMBLED CHRISTIAN PRINCES TO THE SON OF THE FOUNDER OF THE NAME AND FAMILY IN FRANCE.

IT MAY THEREFORE PROPERLY BE DESIGNATED AS THE DUREFF COAT OF ARMS, BEING THAT CARRIED BY THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY FOR OVER SEVEN CENTURIES.

Thus the d'Urfes could boast of belonging to two imperial houses ; to the house of Saxe G. Wlfh of Germany, and to the house of Lasearis, which, derived from Constantinople, had just carried to the West the fortune and its ancient splendor. (The de Lasearis coat of arms is now the imperial coat of arms of Russia.) We have already seen the d'Urfé united in an alliance with a branch of the Bourbon-Vandome.

* * * * *

“The revolution of 1789, which seems to have taken upon itself the mission of effacing all traces of the past to commence a new era, has hardly left anything remaining which could recall the glory and opulence of this celebrated family.”

The d'Urfe coat of arms, de vere au chef gules, is a simple one, as all of the time of the first crusade were. De veré is supposed to represent a squirrel skin (Varus, a squirrel), and in heraldry is drawn and represents squirrel skins united, showing white and gray ; or, as heraldry has it, argent et azure (white and blue). The crest is a mailed hand rising out of a coronet, which may be on a helmet ; the motto is probably “constancy.” The effect of the coat of arms is as follows :

The red band should be wider, shaded parts blue, unshaded, in white.

The coat of arms of William d'Urfe, Grand Master of the Knights Templars at Malta, was a Lion rampant de vere, i. e., drawn as if silhouetted out of a de vere field on a red background.

The coat of arms of Marquis d'Urfe was quartered d'Urfe in petence on a quartering of 1 and 4. De Lasearis and Vintimille 2 and 3. Savoy. The crest 9 ostrich plumes—5 black, 4 white.

This is a very handsome coat of arms when painted, the de Lasearis being gold double-headed crowned eagles on a red field.

BIOGRAPHY.

The first person by the name of Durfee in America, of whom any record can be found, was Thomas Durfee, who came to Portsmouth in the colony of Rhode Island previous to the year 1664, and by traditional information we are led to believe that he came in the year 1660.

The recorded evidence of his appearing at the session of the Colonial General Assembly of Rhode Island, in October 1664, carries unmistakable proof of his presence in the Colony many months previous to that session.

The following, from page 121, Vol. 4, Historical Magazine of America, April, 1860, suggests the theory commonly accepted by the descendants of Thomas Durfee as to the manner in which he was transported to this country:

“In early times emigrants came over frequently as redemptioners; that is, the ship took them without prepayment of passage, and on their arrival sold them by auction, for the lowest term of years for which anyone would take them, and pay the passage money.”

He was admitted a freeman of the town of Portsmouth, R. I., May 6, 1673.

Savage mentions in his genealogy of the early settlers of New England that “Thomas Durfee was thirty-six years old in the year 1679;” that he was taxed eight shillings in 1680. The oath of office as constable was taken by him June 14, 1687, which office he was continued in during the following year (1688).

The following statements of the public services of Mr. Durfee were obtained from the books of record in the office of the town clerk of Portsmouth, R. I. April 14, 1677, he was chosen one of the petit jury. April 23, 1679, at town meeting held at the house of John Briggs, the following privilege was granted: “Voted, It is granted to * * * Thomas Durfee * * * (and five others) to have each of them a license for one year to sell vituals and drink to travelers, and to afford them Entertainment as may be needful and convenient; they first giving bond according to law for the keeping of good order, and do also pay into the treasury ten shillings for each license."

Voted, "It is ordered that none of the five persons shall be allowed to sell that sort of drink commonly called rum at any higher price than after the rate of two pence the gill."

April 2, 1690, at the town meeting held at the house of William Cory, Mr. Durfee was appointed constable.

April 4, 1691, at the town meeting held at the same house, he was chosen one of the Overseers of the Poor.

December 29, 1691, at the town meeting held at the same place he was chosen deputy.

April 4, 1692, and on April 20, 1694, he was chosen as one of the town council, and on December 20 of the later year was again made deputy.

February 11, 1688, "Thomas Durfee sold land (a ferry lot) to William Wodell for 20 bushels of Indian corn."

His son Robert settled on land in Freetown, Mass., in 1686, on a portion of which the city of Fall River was built. Thomas gave to his son Robert a deed of this land in the year 1678, which was in the possession of Walter C. Durfee, Esq., deceased, of Fall River, as a sacred relic.

On the 30th of January, 1689, he deeded to his son Thomas, "for love, &c., my dwelling-house and land belonging to it situate in a place called Common Fence near Pocasset river, eight (8) acres in extent."

August 2, 1698, upon petition of himself and wife, Deliverance (late widow of Abiel Tripp, of Portsmouth) for confirming a ferry between Rhode Island and Bristol upon the heir of said Abiel Tripp; it was enacted by the Assembly "that the ferry be stated upon said Thomas Durfee and his wife till the heir of said Abiel Tripp come of age—which would be in seven years; and that John Borden be permitted to keep said ferry on equal privileges with said Thomas Durfee, both being obliged to carry all magistrates, deputies, jurymen and all other persons in His Majesty's service in the Colony, and also the post ferriage free, and to pay six (6) shillings each, yearly, into the general treasury. All other persons being prohibited from using and following this employment without license from the Assembly."

After the period of the seven years above referred to, it does not appear that Thomas Durfee was in any way connected with the ferry.

There is still in operation a ferry at the same place, which is managed in about the same manner as in the olden time.

Of the few remaining years of the life of Thomas Durfee there does not appear to be any incidental record.

That he was a man of resolute character—having the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen—is shown by the public record of his business transactions. That he was a good man, is proven by scriptural language, "a good man leaveth an inheritance," the evidence of which is found in his will, and in those imperishable traits of character found in his posterity; among whom there have been the founders of industries and cities, the pioneers of the unsettled frontiers of our country, the statesmen of the Nation and State, the students of our leading universities, those who have distinguished themselves as men of learning upon the benches of the courts, from the lowest to the highest in the State, and before the bar as attorneys of more than ordinary ability.

The scene of the days of his activity having been subject to the devastations incident to the occupation of an hostile army, there is no doubt but that much record relative to Thomas Durfee must have been lost in the smoke and flame of the Revolutionary struggle.

The following is a record of his family; his first wife and mother of his sons we have never been able to learn anything about, and as this would be a great comfort to know it will be ever missed by the many who will "call her blessed:"

2. Durfee, Robert (Thomas 1st). Son of Thomas and first wife, of Portsmouth, R. I.; born in Portsmouth, R. I., March 10, 1665; died in Freetown, Mass., May 10, 1718; married in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1687, to MARY SANFORD, of Portsmouth, R. I., daughter of John and Mary (Gorton) Sanford (John Sanford was born in Boston, Mass, June 4, 1633). Born in Portsmouth, R. I., March 30, 1664. Died in Freetown, Mass., November 15, 1748.

Their children were—

10.—1st. Thomas, born January 19, 1690.

11.—2d. John, born May 14, 1691.

12.—3d. Benjamin, born January, 30, 1695; died November 8, 1764.

13.—4th. Peleg, born April 2, 1698.

14.—5th. Mary, born January 29, 1700.

15.—6th. Elizabeth, born in 1702.

Mrs. Durfee was a granddaughter of Samuel Gorton, of Warwick, R. I.; she married a second time.

Robert Durfee settled in Freetown, Mass., on a tract of land which his father purchased of William Brewster and John Rogers for £65, as it appears by deed May 29, 1778, one-half of tenth lot of Freeman's purchase. He was the first settler by the name of Durfee in Freetown, Mass. (later Fall River). The records of Portsmouth, R. I., August 20, 1692, show as follows: Robert Durfee of Freetown, in the county of Bristol, New England, bought of John Sanford (who states that Robert is his brother-in-law) 20 acres, more or less, called "Sanfords land," in Portsmouth, for £60.

The Records of Portsmouth also show that on February 6, 1698, Robert Durfee, of Freetown, Mass., bought 35 acres of land, near Taunton river, of Peleg Shearman and Daniel Wilbur.

On November 1, 1700, Mr. Durfee was chosen, with other persons, to settle the question of a boundary line between Freetown and Tiverton.

In the early records of Freetown he is often mentioned.

On page 222, of Vol. 20, N. E. Historical and Genealogical Register of 1866, is the following statement:

"Robert Durfee was a lieutenant of militia, a Selectman of Freetown 4 years, assessor 4 years. Town clerk 1 year. Representative to General Court 1716. He was buried on a hill near Taunton river, at a place called 'Gages Banks,' and when the Fall River Rail Road was built (136 years after) his remains were disinterred and removed to the easterly side of the highway leading from Freetown to Fall river."

(This spot will not be forgotten by the writer, who was permitted to visit the neglected grave of Mr. Durfee, the "first named Durfee born in America," while a guest of Walter C. Durfee, Esq., in August, 1898. The day was warm and the way up through the tangled undergrowth and vines was difficult. My friend thought he knew the way, but finally had to call to our assistance an Italian whom we found picking wild blackberries.

It is hoped that a real interest in the preservation of these graves, or rather the removal of the remains, to some public burial place may be undertaken by the descendants of Robert Durfee later on.)

"At a town meeting in Freetown warned by a notification set up at the house of John Simmons, signed by the selectmen, the said meeting held at the house of s^d Simmons, on the first Munday of february, 1703-4, it was then voted that a man should be chosen to indeavor to bring in a man into town to Educate and Instruct Children in Reading and Righting and dispensing the Gospel to the towns exceptance. Voted, Robert Durfee to act according to the vote first expressed."

"John Reed, Jr., town clerk."

BIOGRAPHY OF THOMAS DURFEE, JR.

Thomas Durfee, Jr., was a member of the General Assembly of the Colony of Rhode Island in 1707-1709 and 1713. His wife was Ann Freeborn, and the high estimation placed upon her father, Gideon Freeborn, by his fellow townsmen, in calling him to represent them in the General Assembly of the Colony, is evidence of his good citizenship; her brother, Gideon Freeborn, succeeding also to the honors of his father, represented Portsmouth in the General Assembly in the years 1716-1728 and 1729, and Gideon Freeborn, son of Gideon second, succeeded to the same honors in the years 1745, 1752, 1753 and 1754. The grandfather of Mrs. Durfee (Ann Freeborn) was William Freeborn, who "embarked from Ipswich, Suffolk Co., England, in the Frances, for New England, on the 10th of April, 1634." His family were registered as passengers as follows :

"William Freeborn, at the age of 40 years.

"Mary —— Freeborn, his wife, at the age of 33 years ; and three children, Mary 7 years old ; Sarah 2 years old, and John Aldburgh 14 years old."

The court records of Massachusetts Bay Colony show that William Freeborne became a freeman September 3, 1634.

During the session of court in November, 1637, a record was made of persons prohibited to have arms, one of them being William Freeborne. They were required to turn over their arms to the court by the 30th of the month. On March 12, 1638, the court named him among others to appear before them if they had not left the Colony ; he, having been with others, ordered to leave on account of certain opinions they held as to religion. William Freeborn and his companions retired from the Massachusetts Bay Colony as requested, and settled at Portsmouth, on the island of Rhode Island, in March, 1638, for the reasons above stated.

The Indian name of the place was "Pocasset," and Island "Aquidneck." The following is a copy of the writing to which Freeborn and his companions subscribed at the beginning of the settlement :

"We, whose names are underwritten, do hereby solemnly, in the presence of Jehovah, incorporate ourselves into a body politic ; and as he shall help, will submit our persons, lives and estates unto our Lord Jesus Christ, the King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and to all those perfect and most absolute laws of His, given us in His Holy Word of Truth to be guided and judged thereby. Exod. xxiv, 3, 4; 2 Chron. xi, 3; 2 Kings, xi, 17."

The history of the time of William Freeborne is well preserved, and his descendants that bear the name of Durfee can proudly refer to this noble ancestor.

"June 18, 1717. Thomas Durfee, Jr., petitioned the General Assembly for a good and sufficient highway to be laid out to his farm at Common Fence Point, he having already applied to the Committee of the town of Portsmouth, but had not obtained it."

"The Assembly ordered the Committee to lay out within one month's time a good, lawful and passable highway, fit for horses and carts to pass and repass."

"October 13, 1720. Mr. Durfee answered to the suit of Stephen Brayton for empounding an ox, saying that said ox was unruly, and broke into his meadow with other cattle."

"May 25, 1728. He deeded to his son Gideon, for love, &c., his farm called Common Fence Point, being the most northeasterly part of Rhode Island—60 acres."

"May 29, 1728. He deeded to his son Thomas, for love, etc., 14 acres, and two months later 25 acres."

The will of Gideon Freeborn, father-in-law of Thomas Durfee, Jr., made January 27, 1714-15, proven January 14, 1719-20, has the following entries :

"To daughters (5) five, 500 acres in Pennsylvania equally divided." (Anne, wife of Thomas Durfee, Jr., was one of the five daughters.)

"To his grandson, Gideon Durfee (son of Thos. and Anne Durfee) 100 acres in Coweset purchase, and to his granddaughters Anne Durfee, Sarah Durfee, Patience Durfee, Mary Durfee, Martha Durfee, Susanna Durfee, and Elizabeth Durfee, each to have 40 shillings when 18 years old."

"To grandsons Thomas Durfee and Job Durfee, each 50 acres in Coweset Purchase."

"To Anne Durfee £20, and also share of movable estate."

What has been said of the father of Thomas Durfee, Jr., could well be repeated in reference to the worthy life of his son; he left an inheritance as shown by his will, of which the following is a copy.

WILL OF THOMAS DURFEE, 2d.

February 9, 1729. Will proved February 24, 1729.
Ex. son Gideon.

"To son Gideon four parcels of land, viz :

"He and my son Thomas, are to come to an equal division of all lands in Common Fence Point, both aforementioned farm and that which I have given already to Thomas by two deeds of gift. The house and rest of lands in Common Fence Farm to be equally shared by sons Thomas and Job."

Certain lands were "to be sold by executor and money equally divided to seven daughters, viz: Ann Estes, Sarah Dennis, Patience, Mary, Martha, Susanna and Elizabeth Durfee."

"To daughters, each, a bed. To five unmarried daughters all pewter, brass, iron pots, and rest of household goods undisposed of, and to each a good cow, and to them while unmarried the privilege of eastward chamber to live in. 5. Durfee, William (Thomas 1st). Son of Thomas and first wife (———), of Portsmouth, R. I.; born in Portsmouth, R. I., about 1673; died in Tiverton, R. I., in 1727; married ANN ———, who died in Tiverton, R. I.

Their children were—

33.—1st. David, born March 1, 1700.

34.—2d. Samuel, born March 1, 1702.

35.—3d. Joseph, born about 1705, died in Tiverton, R. I., in 1733, unmarried.

Mr. Durfee's second wife, MARY (———), was probably the mother of his fourth child.

36.—Abigail, born about 1710.

During the year 1698, Mr. Durfee had recorded at the office of the town clerk of Tiverton the ear marks of his cattle.

WILL OF WILLIAM DURFEE.

At the time he made his will, Tiverton was in Bristol county, Massachusetts Bay, New England. Will was dated February 16, 1726.

The following brief of the will was taken from book 5, page 431, Probate Records, Taunton, Mass.

It states first that he is a yeoman.

"Item.—His debts are to be paid by his two sons, Samuel and Joseph Durfey, whom he appoints as executors of his will.

"First. To wife, Mary Durfey, articles as specified, and one negro woman.

WILL OF JOSEPH DURFEE (YEOMAN), son of William and Ann Durfee of Tiverton, Newport county, Rhode Island, a brief taken from book 8, page 37, Probate Records, Taunton, Mass., dated November 14, 1731.

"Item.—Gives land in Tiverton and Dartmouth and all other property to his brother Samuel, whom he appoints executor of his estate."

"Witnesses: Jonathan Read, William Durphey, and Edward Wanton. Probate date November 20, 1733.

6. Durfee, Ann (Thomas 1st). Daughter of Thomas and first wife, of Portsmouth, R. I.; born in Portsmouth, R. I.; died in Portsmouth about 1731; married WILLIAM POTTER, of Portsmouth, R. I., son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Stokes) Potter. Born in Dartmouth, Mass., about 1671.

Their children were (born in Portsmouth, R. I.)—

1.—NATHANIEL POTTER, born about 1692.

Married in 1712 to RUTH MANCHESTER, daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth (——) Manchester.

Nathaniel Potter, admitted a freeman at Newport, R. I., April 30, 1798, was perhaps the above-mentioned son of William.

2.—WILLIAM POTTER, born November 11, 1696.

William Potter, Sr., was admitted a freeman of Portsmouth, R. I., in 1697. On the 14th of June, 1697, he and wife sold to William Burrington ten acres of land for £50.

May 9, 1720, he deeded for love, etc., "to son William Potter, Jr., all his lands and housing in Portsmouth, R. I.

John Fish, of Portsmouth, son of Thomas and Mary, whose will was recorded April 20, 1742, gave to his daughter, Mary, wife of William Potter, £20. Joanna, the wife of John Fish, in her will recorded December 10, 1744, gave to Mary Potter 10s.

It is presumed from this record of wills that Mary Fish was the wife of William Potter, Jr.; no further records of descendants of William and Ann (Durfee) Potter have been found.

7. Durfee, Benjamin (Thomas 1st). Son of Thomas and first wife, of Portsmouth, R. I.; born in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1679; died in Tiverton, R. I., January 6, 1754; married in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1699, to PRUDENCE EARLE, of Portsmouth, R. I., daughter of William and Prudence (——) Earle. Born in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1681. Died in Tiverton, R. I., March 12, 1733.

Their children were—

37.—1st. James, born August 28, 1701; died in 1729 (no issue).

38.—2d. Ann, born January 17, 1703.

39.—3d. Hope, born January 7, 1705.

40.—4th. William, born December 7, 1707; died March 26, 1766; unmarried.

41.—5th. Benjamin, born January 5, 1709.

42.—6th. Mercy, born January 30, 1711.

43.—7th. Lusanna, born January 28, 1713.

44.—8th. Martha, born July 13, 1719.

45.—9th. Thomas, born November 5, 1721.

46.—10th. Richard, born November 9, 1723.

Benjamin Durfee inherited, in 1712, 50 acres of land in the then town of Tiverton, R. I., as shown by the will of his father, in addition to what he had previously given him, consisting of large tracts of land within the present limits of the city of Fall River, Mass. He subsequently acquired more by purchase, and became one of the largest land owners in the vicinity of his home.

“He was a man of great energy of character, quick of comprehension, intelligent, and held in high estimation in the community in which he lived.”

“At his death, in 1754, he left a large estate, some of which yet remains in the family; but, like most large properties, much of it has changed hands, and is owned by others not of the same name. He received by deed of gift from his father, Thomas Durfee, the land from Rodman street on the north, to Osborn street on the south, and extending from the shore to Eight Rod Way," in the city of Fall River.

This land was purchased of William Manchester in 1681, and was given to Benjamin Durfee in 1709.

"He gave this land to his son, Captain Wm. Durfee, and by will Captain Durfee gave the south half to his nephew, Richard Durfee, son of his brother Richard, and James Durfee, the son of his brother Benjamin. The north half he gave to his relative, William Borden. James Durfee sold his portion to David Durfee, the father of the Hon. David Durfee, of Tiverton, who, in turn, gave it to his son, Captain Wm. Durfee, and he, dying in 1816, left it to his children. They sold it to Oliver Chase, and it has since been laid out and much of it sold for building lots, upon which may now be found some of the finest residences of Fall River. The portion that was left to Captain Richard Durfee is yet held in part by his grandchildren—the children of his sons Richard and John." (See Fall River Industries, by Peck & Earle.)

BENJAMIN DURFEE'S LAND.

The following is a brief statement from book 16, pages 44 and 45, Probate Records, Taunton, Mass.:

"Division of lands given by Benjamin Durfee, late of Newport, in County of Newport, in Colony of Rhode Island," etc., yeoman, deceased (order dated May 6, 1755). To his son, Thomas Durfee, and three grandsons, James Durfee, Joseph Hix and William Durfee, by deceased's last will, the land was divided as follows :

"To son, Thomas, certain lands described, 138 acres.

"To William Durfee, grandson of Benjamin Durfee, land, 138 acres.

"To heirs of Joseph Hicks (deceased), one of the grandsons, 220 acres land, etc.

"To James Durfee, one of the grandsons, land, 70 acres."

The following inscriptions are on the grave stones of the Tallman family, at Providence, R. I.:

There is record of the marriage of a Benjamin Durfee in the books of the Town Clerk of Freetown, at the clerk's office, in Assonet village, dated January 11, 1763, to Ruth Borden. No further account being given, and in view of the statements made in the will of Benjamin Durfee on file with the Records of the Probate Court of Plymouth, Mass., book 19, page 192, it is probable that if Ruth Borden became the wife of Benjamin, son of Robert Durfee, she died soon.

*It is stated in the " Will of Benjamin Durfee, of Middleborough, in the town of Plymouth, dated November 6, in the 4th year of His Majesty's Reign, King George the 1st, A. In the will of Job Briggs there is a provision that Sarah (Briggs) Durfee, the first wife of Thomas, is to have £5.

The following are copies of original papers which Miss Elizabeth Langley (deceased 1899), of 45 Pelham street, Newport, R. I., had in July, 1897.

“Newport, January 5th, 1740.

“This Certifies whom it concerns, that the Banns of Marriage between Thomas Durfee and Mary Tripp, have been duly published in Trinity Church, in Newport above, and no objection that I know of offered why they may not be joined in matrimony, for testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand, day and date above.”

(Signed) “JAMES HONEYMAN.”

“These may Testify that Thomas Durfee and Mary

Tripp were joined together in marriage as the law directs in Portsmouth, in the Co. of Newport, R. I., * * * the 16th day of March, A. Domini 1740."

(Signed) "JOHN COGGESHALL, Justice of the Peace."

Miss Langley had also a commission given by Wm. Wanton, Governor of R. I., which is in part as follows :

"To Thomas Durfee, gent, greeting, you Ensign of the Company or Trained Band of the town of Portsmouth, Co. of Newport, in Name of King George &c. * * * Office Ensign dated 4th May in the 5th year of reign A. D. 1732."

(Signed) "WM. WANTON, Gov."

Benjamin Durfee, No. 90, son of Thomas, had quite an experience as a soldier, about the time of the Revolution. Miss Langley permitted a copy to be made of the petition he presented to the Legislature, which covers his record of hardship and imprisonment. Benjamin did not marry, and his memory will be perpetuated through his patriotism, as shown by the copy of the petition which is on the following pages.

a Loathsome goal until the eighth day of June, A. D. 1776, when your said Petitioner, by the assistance of Divine Providence, effected an escape and arrived at his wonted home and natural place of abode on Rhode Island, on the Seventh Day of October, A. I., daughter of Joseph and Abigail (Russell) Borden; born at Tiverton, R. I., in August, 1731; died at Freetown, Mass., in July, 1802.

Mr. Durfee "inherited a large landed estate from his father;" "and his wife received a portion of the water power of Fall River, Mass., upon the division of her father's estate."

"He lived upon the spot where the present county house now stands in Fall River." "His farm extended from Taunton river on the west to the North Watuppa pond on the east, and on the south nearly to the land upon which the Armory building now stands."

"He was deservedly conspicuous, active, and influential in his social, political, and public life. He was long a member of the General Court of Massachusetts, in both the House and the Senate, and was for six years a member of the Governor's council, and as such was one of the honorable pall bearers at the funeral of Governor JOHN HANCOCK, in 1793."

"He had a serious infirmity in one of his limbs, which prevented him from military service in the War of the Revolution, but was commissioned as captain of one of the militia companies of Freetown, in 1776."

"He mortgaged his entire farm to raise funds to support the General Congress, and when he was paid by the Government, it was in Continental currency, which had become so depreciated it was of little value in comparison to the amount loaned.

"Remaining as honorable at the last as he had been patriotic at the first, he refused to pay to his mortgagee the currency he had received from the Government. He said: 'I received good and substantial money on this loan, and the farm itself shall go to restore it.' The farm was therefore turned over to his creditor, and thus Thomas Durfee became comparatively poor."

(The above is an extract from an article prepared by S. Angier Chase and published in the Fall River Evening News, of March 24, 1897.)

Mass., daughter of Ephraim and Sarah (——) Cole; born in Plymouth, Mass., in 1727. (Ephraim Cole (above) was the son of Ephraim and Rebecca (Gray) Cole, and a brother to Mary Cole, the wife of Peleg Durfee, 13.)

In "Davis Land Marks of Plymouth," the following acct. of land, or house and lot, owned by Mrs. Durfee, may be found : "Mrs. Durfee owned the house built by her father, on the corner of Leyden st., Plymouth, Mass. After her father's death in the year 1752, she sold it to John Churchill."

47. Durfee, Thomas (Thomas 3d, Robert 2d, Thomas 1st). Son of Thomas and Mary (Cory) Durfee, of Freetown, Mass.; born in Freetown, Mass., March 24, 1717; married.

I., September 23, 1750; married in Newport, R. I., May 1, 1746, to AMEY BURROUGHS, of Newport, R. I., daughter of Ezekiel Burroughs; born in Newport, R. I., August 25, 1725.

Their only child (137) Abigail, was born at Newport, R. I., in 1750.

Mrs. Durfee married a second time, August 29, 1762, to CHARLES EASTERBROOKS. Their only child MARY, born August 13, 1766, died March 10, 1831; married March 1, 1789, to WHEELER MARTIN, a brother of Gov. SIMEON MARTIN, who married Abigail Durfee.

Mrs. (Durfee) Easterbrooks had a sister (Desire Burroughs), "who became the wife of Esick Hopkins, the 1st Admiral of the United States Navy."

Capt. Robert Durfee was a mariner. He was master of a vessel; was captain of one of the vessels employed by the British government to transport soldiers to Louisburg. Was allowed £20 for cabin expenses, July, 1746 (see vol. 5, R. I. Colonial Record, page 180).

The records of Freetown, dated March 20, 1749, show that Gideon Hathaway was paid his bill for keeping Hannah Durfee 8 weeks, at 25s. per week, £10 0 0 (probably Hannah was his wife's cousin, and daughter of John and Susanna (Eddy) Durfee).

2d.—MARY LISCOMBE, who married at Taunton, Mass., in 1792.

3d.—ABIGAIL LISCOMBE, who married at Taunton, Mass., in 1793.

The Vital Records of Taunton, Mass., were lost by a fire, and there is very little of the record that has been regained. The record of births in the colonial period and later were destroyed entirely.

Letters of administration were issued to Annie Liscombe on account of the estate of her deceased husband, May 31, 1780, at Taunton, Mass. She filed an inventory on June 6, 1780, the total of which was £1,022 5s.

I., in 1774; the census taker at that time showed the number in his family to agree with above record of parents and children.

During the period of the War of the Revolution, when Newport, R. I., was occupied by the British army, Mr. Durfee resided on School St., in a house containing eight rooms, and had nine persons in his family; one stable and two horses—as shown by a list of the inhabitants of Newport prepared by direction of the Commanding Officer of the British army, by three citizens of Newport, one of whom is supposed to have been Mr. Durfee. He was Captain of a company of Loyalists at Newport, known as the "Loyal Newport Associators;" he received his commission as Captain from the British General, Pigot, January 1, 1778. At the close of the War for Independence he settled on some lots at Shelburne, in New Brunswick—land given him by the English government. Mr. Durfee was a prosperous merchant in Newport for years before the War of the Revolution—the writer has original letters written by him to his half-brother, Capt. Oliver Durfee, who resided in Middletown, also bills of lading of goods consigned to Oliver to be transported to Conn. and exchanged. The war found the two brothers in arms, Oliver with the Colonists and Joseph with the British.

The residence of Gideon Durfee, while in Tiverton, R. I., was on that portion of the estate of his father near Watterupper Pond bequeathed to him in his father's will, until he removed with his family to Wayne County, New York.

He held a commission as Lieutenant of Militia from George III, King of England, and this document was in later years a relic in the possession of his grandson, Philo Durfee (deceased).

"Nevertheless, when the War of the Revolution broke out, he was a sturdy patriot, and was enrolled and served as a minute man; at the same time sending his two eldest sons to serve in the Revolutionary Army."

"They were under the command of General Sullivan during his famous retreat from Rhode Island."

Shortly after the close of the war his two sons, Earle and Lemuel, removed from Tiverton and settled in Cambridge, New York. In the spring of 1791 Mr. Durfee, with his wife and children, set out on their journey to Wayne County, New York.

On pages 380 to 382 of a book entitled "Phelps and Gorman Purchase," the following account is given relative to the settlement of Wayne County, N. Y., in 1790:

"91," 92, near the present city of Palmyra by "Gideon Durfee, the elder, his sons Gideon, Edward, Job, Pardon, Stephen, and Lemuel."

"The Durfee family were from Tiverton, R. I. In the Summer of 1790, Gideon and Edward came first to Farmington, and Gideon returning in the fall represented the country so favorably, that the whole family resolved upon emigration. Gideon with Isaac Springer, came back in the winter of 1790 and '91 with an ox sled, consuming $17\frac{1}{2}$ days in the journey. Gideon purchased of John Swift his choice of 1,600 acres. He located it on what was long known as 'Durfee street,' a short distance below Palmyra, securing a large amount of the flats on the Ganargeva; Being soon rejoined by his brother Edward, the brothers and Springer built a cabin and clearing six acres, and without the use of a plough, planted it to corn.

"The brothers returned to Rhode Island and brought out their brothers, Pardon and Job, with their families, coming in a bateau and landing at their new home in the wilderness, almost destitute of food.

"They were rejoiced on their arrival to find their corn fit for roasting, a forwardness they have never since known.

"It served them the two fold purposes of food, and confidence in the soil and climate, the six acres yielded 50 bushels to the acre, a quantity that served their own wants and over stocked the market as there were few consumers.

The remainder of the large family came out in the winter of 1791 and '92. They had a large crop, some of which was marketed at Schenectady: probably the first that ever reached that market from as far west as Palmyra.

Otherwise prosperous, sickness soon laid a heavy hand upon the large household, 17, out of 22, being prostrated at one time with fevers; their first bread was made from pounded corn; their first grinding was procured at Wilders mill, and occasionally at the Friends mill Jerusalem."

The following is from the same publication and written by Stephen Durfee.

"There was general prosperity in the early settlement. All were friendly, mutual dependence made us so; and struggling with the hardships of pioneer life there was a fellow feeling a sympathy for each others misfortunes; but little of which exists now; The first curse that came upon us was whiskey distilleries when the new settlers would take their corn and rye and get them converted to what was the cause in many instances of their ruin; and that of many of their sons; there was not only habitual every day drinking but much intoxication; I saw so much of the evils of intoxication that I refrained entirely and was almost alone in it; I think the first temperance movement practical one in all this region was made by me when I raised my house in 1811. when I invited my neighbors to the raising; I gave out that no liquor would be provided, and although it was a new experiment I had no difficulty in raising my house; Strict temperance was not then a discipline with the Society of Friends to which I belonged but afterwards became so."

"Our first commerce was the navigation of the Ganargeva creek; then came the big wagons, then the Erie canal that gave us fair steady prices for produce, raised the value of land and brought on a new era of enterprise and prosperity."

The following is gleaned from the Military History of Wayne Co. N. Y. :

"The first tract of land sold and deeded in East Palmyra Wayne Co N. Y. was a lot of six hundred (600) acres south of Mud Creek square in form, purchased by Gideon Durfee May 19th 1791."

"The log hut of Mr. Durfee standing in 1877. near the Presbyterian Parsonage was the first habitation in that section."

"The burying ground of the Durfee Family was on the farm of Ira Lakey; the first burial there was a child of Gideon Durfee Junior, and in that plat lie the remains of the early settlers."

"The farm east of Gideon Durfee Senior was occupied by his son-in-law Weaver Osband."

"In 1796 Louis Phillipe who afterwards became the French King, while traveling through the country stopped with Mr. Gideon Durfee, being on his way east from a visit to the Falls of Niagara."

"Gideon Durfee Sr. gave $\frac{1}{2}$ of the land on which the East Palmyra Presbyterian Church was erected in July 1807."

"The first Town meeting was held at Gideon Durfee Sr's house in April 1796."

It is also stated in the history referred to that Gideon Durfee, Sr., was a soldier in the Revolutionary Army. The following is a record of his military service as found in "Mass. Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War, compiled from the Archives." "He was a Private in Capt. Peleg Simmons's Co Col. Christopher Olney's regt. muster roll dated Newport, R. I. Oct. 23rd 1781. joined and marched Oct (?) 8th 1781. reported on guard duty."

David Gifford was highly esteemed by his fellow townsmen, and was, by their choice, made active and prominent in military and civil life. He was chosen by the General Assembly of Rhode Island to perform various military duties. In 1775, he was appointed Lieutenant in the first militia company of Portsmouth, of which, in 1776, he became Captain. In December, 1776, he received permission to proceed to Rhode Island with a flag of truce to secure an exchange of three soldiers belonging to his company, that were prisoners of war in the hands of the British. In August, 1777, he was appointed a Lieutenant in Major Munroe's Co. He also commanded some boating parties. There is no personal record of his presence with the army during August, 1778, when the movement under General Sullivan took place. Without doubt he did his duty well. He was a recruiting officer in 1780, and was a member of the General Assembly in 1777 and 1780.

The home of Mr. Durfee was in Tiverton, R. I., where all of his children were born, and where his oldest daughter was married. His residence was on his farm, which he cultivated. His grandson, Stephen Durfee, states that "he sold his farm and two slaves," and his granddaughter writes that he removed to Madison, N. Y., in 1803, and purchased a farm near Madison, on which he lived only a few years, dying probably in 1805, when his oldest son, Samuel, was but 16 years old. The family remained together at the new home until, one by one, they started in life for themselves. Samuel succeeded in becoming the owner of the homestead, and finally it passed into the possession of his son, Benjamin A. Durfee.

Mrs. Hammond, of Milford, Kent Co., Del., writes in her letter of May 8, 1896, of the death of her uncle, Burrington Durfee, as follows:

"Burrington Durfee's death was singular as well as sad. He was on a building with a carpenter shingling, when some birds kept flying right over his head. He threw up his hand with a chisel in it to frighten them off. It flew out of the handle, came down, struck him on his thigh, and severed an artery—bled to death—barely reached his home. He was a promising young man."

No record of the date of his death has been given. He was unmarried.

"Judge Durfee was an uncompromising patriot, and when Mr. Chaloner presented his request, was about mounting his horse to ride to Boston; turning to the young man he told him very decidedly that if he would promise to be loyal to the cause of American Independence, he might have his daughter; otherwise he would not give his consent. Col. Durfee married a second time, January 29, 1819, to Mrs. ELIZABETH NICHOLS. Col. Durfee's first wife's mother was a granddaughter of Lieut. Samuel Gardner, who died in Swansea, Mass., December 8, 1696.

Ebenezer Weaver Pierce, of Assonet Village, Freetown, Mass., states in his sketches of Fall River and Freetown that "Col. Durfee removed to Tiverton, R. I., and was elected to a seat in the General Assembly of that State, but spent his last years in and died at Assonet." While living in Tiverton, in 1816, he and his wife, with others, organized the First Congregational Church of Fall River, Mass.

The Commissioner of Pensions, at Washington, D. C., in reply to a request, on August 23, 1895, gave from the records of his office a statement of the military service of Col. Durfee as follows, viz :

"In the year 1775 he was commissioned as Captain, and raised a company of minute men, which company was stationed at Fall River, Mass., for about 15 months ; he then took command of a company of about 60 men and marched to the State of New York, where he joined the regiment commanded by Col. Thomas Carpenter, and in a few days after his arrival was actively engaged in the battle of White Plains ; remained in New York State until November, 1776, when he marched with his company to Tiverton, R. I., and joined the regiment commanded by Col. John Cook, which regiment he assisted in covering the retreat of the American troops from that island (probably the island of Rhode Island is meant). Late in the year 1776 he was commissioned as Major in the regiment commanded by Col. John Hathaway, and was stationed at Little Compton, R. I., for about six months ; in February or March, 1778, was stationed as a Major with 20 men under his command at Fall River, Mass. In May of that year was engaged in a skirmish with the British troops at that place, and compelled them to retreat with the loss of several men killed and wounded. August, 1778, he joined Gen. Sullivan's expedition to Rhode Island, and served as a Major in Col. Whitney's regiment about one month. From thence he went to Pawtucket and did duty as a Major until December, 1778, a period of about 3 months. In January or February, 1779, he received a Lieutenant-Colonel's commission, and with his regiment joined Gen. Cornell's brigade at Tiverton, R. I., where he continued to serve until the evacuation of the island by the British troops in October, 1779. From that time until he left the service, late in December, 1779, he was stationed at Newport."

Col. Durfee's will, dated Fall River, Mass., April 17, 1834, is recorded on page 473, of book No. 83, Probate Records, at Taunton, Mass., and is in part as follows :

"Item.—To wife Elizabeth, house and land bought of Nichols.

"Item.—To son Aaron great arm chair and cushion and round mahogany table and wearing apparel.

"Item.—To grandson John Durfee Wilson watch, desk, high post bedstead and cord ; one feather bed, one straw bed, two blankets, two sheets, one bolster, two pillows and pillow case and great Bible.

"Item.—All real and personal estate to wife Elizabeth."

A codicil changes executor from Aaron Durfee, his son, to John Nichols, January 25, 1841.

This change of executor was no doubt made necessary from the fact that his son Aaron, some years before, removed to the State of Illinois.

The will of Mrs. Elizabeth Durfee, widow of Col. Joseph Durfee, dated Freetown, Mass., March 3, 1852, was recorded in book 100, on page 201, January 3, 1854, at Taunton, Mass., and the following items are embraced in it.

"To son William Nichols $1.00. To grandson Eleazer Nichols $1.00. To daughter Chloe Hills wife of David Hills all other estate &c. Appoints son-in-law David Hills executor."

Mr. S. A. Chace, in an article on the Military History of Fall River previous to 1824, published in the Fall River "Evening News," March 24, 1897, mentions the period of the Revolutionary war as follows, viz :

"During the early part of the war which followed the Declaration of Independence, Tiverton and the part of Freetown now included in the city of Fall River was constantly harassed and distressed by the enemy, whose ships were often at Newport and farther up the Narragansett Bay.

“On a Sunday morning, the 25th of May, 1778, about 150 British troops came up the bay in boats and landed at Fall River. They first set fire to the house of Thomas Borden, near the shore, and to his grist and saw-mills located near where the Metacomet mill is now standing. These buildings were entirely destroyed. The men of the place rallied under the command of Colonel, then Major, Joseph Durfee, and after a brave and spirited resistance, repulsed the invaders and compelled them to retreat. They left two men killed, near what is now the junction of South Main and Pocasset streets. In their retreat they were closely pursued to the shore, and another man was killed after stepping on board one of the boats. In their retreat they also set fire to several houses, one of which was the house of Richard Borden, then an old man.

“These fires were all extinguished by the vigilance of their pursuers, but they did secure the old man as a prisoner and carried him off in one of their boats. As they approached Bristol Ferry, the Americans on shore began to fire on the boats, and Mr. Borden, with the grit and sagacity of his race, which has been so efficient in the development of this city, laid himself down in the bottom of the boat. To this his captors objected, and attempted to force him to sit up and take the same chances for being hit that they had. In this he would not aid them, and they attempted to stand him up by main force. During this operation two of the Englishmen who were holding him up were shot and fell overboard. Mr. Borden was soon after released on parole. The Englishmen who were killed in the engagement before the retreat were buried on the same day near the place where they fell, the head of one laid beside the feet of the other.

“In 1777 while the British army had possession of the island of Rhode Island, General Prescott, the officer in command, was quartered at a house some distance from the main body of his troops, and was attended only by an aid-de-camp and a small guard. Colonel Barton, an American officer, a native of Warren, then included in the territory of the Old Colony, having learned the position of Prescott, resolved to make a desperate effort to capture him. He embarked on the night of the tenth of July with about forty volunteers on board of four whale boats, and landed on the west shore of the island. They silently approached the house where Prescott was quartered, seized and silenced the sentinel at the door, and entering the house took the General from his bed and returned with him in safety to the American forces. Among these volunteers was a young, bold, nimble-footed Indian. He was among the first to seize the sentinel at the door, and was one of the two that led Prescott by the arm a captive from the house from which he was taken. After leaving the house the Indian, recollecting that Prescott's sword had been left behind, returned to the chamber, got the sword and returning overtook the company before they had reached their boats. That Indian was Daniel Page; he was born within the limits of the present city of Fall River; was well known and much respected by the early residents of the town, and is still remembered by many now living who were children at the time of his death, one of whom was the writer.

“He died in 1829, when he was 80 years of age, and was the last male member of the Pocasset tribe. On the 17th of October, 1781, Cornwallis proposed a surrender of the British army. The next day the terms of capitulation were drawn up and signed, but it was not until 1783 that a final treaty was effected, and not until January, 1789, was Washington elected President of the United States. During the progress of the revolution and the intervening years the civil government of the United States was in a grievous condition, but it is not of interest in this narrative save to say that the military organizations of the country were necessarily kept up with as much enthusiasm as ever before.

“The town of Freetown was incorporated in 1683, and embraced the territory which has since been bounded on the south by the Rhode Island line. The village of Assonet was the chief settlement of the town, and the first military company was organized there in July of the same year. Other organizations followed until four companies were in thriving condition. The officers of these companies, living in the part of the town which afterward was set off as Fall River, were Captains: George Brightman, 1755; Joel Hathaway, 1771; Thomas Durfee, 1776; Henry Brightman, 1777; Joseph Read, 1781; Luther Winslow, 1789; Ichabod Reed, 1793; Benjamin Brayton, 1797.

"Lieutenants: William Winslow, 1762; Stephen Borden, 1771; Oliver Reed, Jr., 1776; Benjamin Brayton, 1793; Robert Miller, 1798.

"Ensigns: Josiah Lawton, 1762; Ambrose Barnaby, Jr., 1771; Amos Snell, 1776; William Elsbree, 1781; David Cleveland, 1789; Robert Miller, 1797; Joseph H. Luther, 1801.

"The field officers were Major Joseph Durfee, 1778; promoted Lieutenant-Colonel in 1781, and to Colonel in 1782. In 1803 Fall River was set off from Freetown and incorporated as the town of Fall River. In 1804 the name of the town was changed to Troy. This name continued until 1834, but as the village continued to grow, and still retained the name of Fall River, it was deemed desirable to abandon the name of Troy, and the name was again changed to Fall River."

The following article, written by a descendant of a companion of Col. Durfee, is so interesting it has been thought best to copy it for insertion here:

"Battle of Fall River."

"Stray Leaves from a Note Book of the Happenings of Olden Days."

"Dec. 7, 1776, 6,000 British and Hessian troops were landed at Newport, R. I. The American forces upon the Island at once retreated to the main land. Col. Cook retreated to Fort Barton at Tiverton Heights, the fort commanding the approaches to Howland's Ferry, now Stone Bridge, and Col. West to the hills opposite Bristol Ferry. Women and children by hundreds fled in dismay from the Island. A picket guard patrolled the whole shore from Taunton river to Seaconnet point. All New England was aroused to a sense of danger, and the shores of Narragansett bay and the Island became two hostile camps. The winter was passed in raids, skirmishes and projects for the invasion of the Island, only to be one by one abandoned. Gen. Clinton, in January, 1777, resigned the command on the Island and returned to England, and Lord Percy followed him in the following May, leaving the command on the Island to Gen. Prescott.

"In July, Col. Barton, with 40 men, embarked in whale boats, passed through the English fleet, landed on the Island, and took Gen. Prescott and one of his aids from their beds at midnight, returning through the fleet with their prisoners in safety. Fall River was represented in this raid by two members of the 'forty,' Thomas Elsbree and Job Wordell.

"Major Gen. Pigot was left in command on the Island. Fort Butts, the extensive ruins of which still remain, was situated on the highest land between Howland's and Bristol Ferries, and was the northern outpost of the British forces on the Island.

"Early in 1778, a corps of Tories were organized upon the Island, and under their leadership raids were made from the Island upon the towns and villages along the shores of Narragansett Bay. An expedition landed in Warren, plundered and burnt the town, and passing down the neck, burnt a church and 18 houses in Bristol, returning in safety to the Island. In May, 1778, a party under Col. Ayers, of 150 British soldiers and Tories, who were natives of the vicinity, at 3 o'clock A. M., landed at 'High Hill,' the present site of the Iron Works company's manufactories. The extensive flat, now covered by wharves, depots and manufactories, was the farm of Richard Borden. They burned the farm house, grist and saw-mills of Mr. Borden, and then hurried to South Main street, up Anawan street, which was then but a cart path to the shore.

"Between Anawan street and the river was a strip of wild, rocky woodland ; near the corner of Pocasset and South Main streets was a large rock in the corner of Simeon Borden's garden. At this rock a sentinel was stationed to guard the bridge which was in front of where the City Hall is now located. This sentinel was surprised and captured, but as the invaders proceeded to disarm him he began to talk very loud and tried to break his gun across the rock. The sentinel just north of the bridge heard the noise and gave the alarm. The bridge had been torn up for some time, and the river had been crossed on simple planks. The sentinel, after giving the alarm, rushed to the bridge and pulled the planks into the north side, thereby cutting off the escape of Mrs. Hope Borden, who had fled from her burning home at the shore through the woods and rocks along the river, as the enemy occupied the only roadway to Main street. Finding the planks removed, she rushed across the road and laid, sheltered by the rocks and bushes, with the bullets whistling around her, in a pasture now covered by the Berden block.

"The alarm had now become general. The women and children of the village had fled to the woods of New Boston and the patriots of the vicinity had rallied at the Four Corners, armed for the fight. Col. Joseph Durfee took command. There was a stone wall that came down to the corner of North Main and Bedford streets, and behind this wall, as a breastwork, Col. Durfee placed his men, 14 in number. As the British forces approached the bridge, they poured a volley of bullets upon them, which was a surprise, as the enemy had been told they would meet but little opposition to their plans.

"They approached the bridge to find it impassable, but they stood upon the bank of the river and poured volley after volley upon the unseen foe, whose rapid fire deceived them as to their number.

"The Quequechan river at this time was a wild, dashing stream, coming down from the heavy forest land reaching out to the lakes, while below the bridge it rushed to the shore like a mountain torrent. The boats of the expedition had the tides against them in coming up the bay, and their arrival at 3 o'clock A. M. had been three hours later than they had planned. The gray dawn was approaching; the whole country was alarmed by the reports of musketry and the blazing of buildings, and recruits came pouring in to swell the band behind the stone walls. A regiment on the march for Fort Barton, at Tiverton Heights had encamped for the night a few miles north of the village. They were aroused by the conflagration and steady report of musketry firing, and at once marched towards the scene of the conflict, though they were without a single round of ammunition. Col. Ayers had drawn his forces back from the galling fire at the bridge, and when he heard the drums and fifes of an approaching regiment he at once ordered a retreat to the boats. The retreat was safely accomplished, but the invaders were followed, step by step, by the patriots from behind the stone wall, who fired upon them from every sheltering rock or tree on their march to the shore, giving them a parting volley after they had embarked.

"Their killed or wounded were carried to the boats, except two, who were buried on the south bank of the river, where the south end of the Watapee mill now stands. When the mill was built the bones of the two British soldiers were taken up and reburied in the north cemetery.

"As the boats of the expedition approached Bristol Ferry on their return to Newport, the patriot forces encamped there opened fire upon them from musketry and cannon loaded with stone and scrap iron, whereby many of the soldiers were killed and wounded."

Capt. Richard Durfee resided near the south line of Freetown, Mass., in Tiverton, R. I.

Capt. Durfee's military record for the period of the Revolutionary War, gleaned from the files of the State House, at Providence, R. I., and from archives of the Rhode Island Historical Society, and other sources, is as follows :

He enlisted in Capt. Loring Peck's company of Col. Lippitt's Rhode Island Regiment in 1776.

Vol. 1, page 4, Rhode Island archives, shows that he was paid on August 16, 1776, to July 1, 1776, for two months and fourteen days, £4 18s 8d. £2 per month.

File No. 597, Rhode Island Historical Society's Military Papers, shows that he was on the roll of Capt. Peck's Co.

File No. 134 of the same is a Pay Abstract of Capt. Loring Peck's company for travelings wages from Chatham to Smithfield, and Cumberland from Peekskill to said places, Chatham, January 18, 1777. Received £2 1s and 6d.

He was appointed by the General Assembly of Rhode Island as lieutenant, and later captain of the third company of militia of the town of Tiverton, R. I., which company was attached to the regiment commanded by Col. John Cook. He was paid for five days, August 1778, at £3 per day. This regiment formed a part of the army of General Sullivan ; a record of the position it held during the battle of Rhode Island has not been ascertained.

Through the kindness of Mr. F. E. Durfee, of Providence, a statement of the service rendered by Capt. Durfee, upon which a pension was granted him, prepared by the Commissioner of Pensions, at Washington, D. C., July 14, 1896, was presented to the writer, and is as follows :

"SIR : Replying to your request, &c., * * the military record of Richard Durfee, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, you are advised that he made application for pension September 8, 1832, at which time he was residing in Tiverton, R. The First Congregational Church, of Fall River, was organized at the home of Capt. Durfee, January 9, 1816. Among the five persons that established this church were Col. Joseph Durfee and wife Elizabeth, and Richard Durfee and Welthea, wife of Charles Durfee, Esq. Thomas R. Durfee, son of Charles and Welthea, subsequently became a member. Richard Durfee was elected Deacon in 1823.

Genealogical data has been preserved in many ways, and often little thought of by the one who made the record. Miss Eliza Dennie Boardman, of Boston, Mass., a great granddaughter of Abigail (Durfee) Martin, states in a letter received in 1897 that her only authority for the age of Abigail Durfee is an old sampler on which is the following: "Abigail Durfee, her sampler, Providence November 18, 1763, in the 13th year of her age. This needle-work of mine can tell, I in my youth was learned well: and by my elders also taught, not to spend my time for naught. Let this be to remember me, though I may be forgotten, when I am dead, laid in my grave, and all my bones are rotten."

"My mother as a child often visited her grandmother at Rehoboth, and was probably given the sampler by her."

Lieut.-Gov. Simeon Martin, the husband of Abigail (Durfee) Martin, was early identified with the Government of the Colony of Rhode Island, in the stand taken to secure Independence, was appointed a Lieutenant in the 9th company of Col. Henry Babcock's regiment, in January, 1776. In August of the same year he was appointed Captain in the 2d regiment, of which Christopher Lippett, Esq., was Colonel; and in the October following became Captain in Col. James Mitchell Varnum's 1st battalion. In June, 1777, he was made Adjutant of Col. Crary's regiment. In July, 1780, was Deputy Commissary of Forage, and directed by the General Assembly of Rhode Island to secure 60 acres of pasture land for "the cattle of the Army and Navy, of His Most Christian Majesty," within the State of Rhode Island. (French Army at Newport.)

In May, 1791, he was appointed Adjutant-General of the Rhode Island Militia.

The above record is a compilation from Vols. 7, 8, and 9, of the Rhode Island Colonial Records.

The following was copied from the Martin Genealogy, by Henry J. Martin (in 1880), who writes about the public life of Gov. Martin:

"He served as a Lieutenant in the Artillery Co., commanded by Col. Crane, and marched to Boston in the 1st expedition against the British, after which he entered service in Rhode Island, in September, 1776, as Captain in the second battalion commanded by Col. Lippett, marched to White Plains, in the battle at Trenton when the British were defeated."

"Appointed Deputy Wagon Master General, with pay of $100.00 per month and subsistence of $20.00 per month

(see Spirit of '76, R. I.); was also Major-General of the State Militia. In 1779, after the British evacuated Newport, he moved to that city; for a number of years he was elected to the General Assembly; also elected from Providence to the same body. After his election as Lieutenant-Governor he retained that office by re-election several years, until 1816, when he declined further service.

The following statements and records are from letters received from Mr. Durfee's grandchildren, and various histories of the town in which Mr. Durfee resided. Some information was obtained from his son, Aaron M., who was living at French Creek, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., in 1902.

I give the information received by mail in nearly the same language as written in the letters received.

Mrs. Alice M. Durfee Page was a resident of Venango, Pa., May 24, 1897, when she wrote as follows:

"My grandfather settled in the town of Benson, Rutland County, Vermont, in 1782 or 1783. He and his father were nailers—nails were made by hand in those good old times.

"When he first settled there it was 20 miles to the nearest neighbor-settler. He worked and cleared his farm summers, and in the winters he went to either Bennington or Burlington and worked at his trade, earning $6.00 per month, when other men worked for their board. He was saving and became a wealthy farmer.

"He was a ranger in the Revolutionary War. They picked out the smartest and bravest men to carry the despatches from one Post to another. Their course was through the woods, with nothing but an Indian trail. He had gone 75 miles on foot between sun and sun, for if they did not get through by day it was almost sure death by the Indians.

"He came across the place where he selected his home when he was a ranger, and said when the war closed he would settle there.

"After living alone six years his mother came to live with him. I have heard my father say that grandfather saved his wages when he was in the army, and when the war closed he paid $60.00 for a wool hat with the Continental money he received as pay for his military service."

Mrs. Mark, of Belvidere, Neb. (now of Mitchell), referring to her grandfather in a letter dated in June, 1897, says:

"At one time he was a slave overseer, when there were slaves in the State where he lived. My father never seemed to be proud of that.

"While a soldier he was detailed as a scout on account of his power of physical endurance. He was a fast runner and was called on to go long distances, carrying despatches through almost endless forests. He would take an Indian lope and keep it up all day. He has been an hundred miles on foot and alone on one trip. Indians and wild animals were quite plentiful, but he never met with any trouble from them.

"After he had settled on his land in Vermont the Indians drove him off once, but he sought the protection of the State soldiers and had no further trouble. I have heard my mother tell about a time when an old man came to see my grandfather—he was raised in the same neighborhood; they were boys together. Grandfather pretended not to know him, and was so deaf he could hardly hear. He could not remember of ever seeing or hearing of such a person. The man tried his best to make my grandfather remember him by telling of incidents that happened when they were boys together; but he had to give it up, telling my mother he never saw anyone whose memory was so poor. After the man left grandfather said he knew him well enough; 'he was a d—d old Tory, and he didn't want him around. All of his children were born on the farm at Benson, Vt.

"He was a strict temperance man; his father drank, and when a boy he was required to get his father's jug filled; he was so ashamed to be seen carrying the jug that he would put it under his leather apron.

"My father has said he did not think grandfather died of old age; he thinks he could have lived a great deal longer if he had not worked so hard the last year he lived. Father went back to Vermont to see his mother. After grandfather had died, she gave him a silver watch that was my grandfather's, and some silver shoe buckles of her own and some that had been grandfather's; also some knee buckles that he had worn on his wedding suit. The shoe buckles were also worn at the time of their marriage; she sent them to my brother on account of his name. He kept them and, I suppose, his son Walter has them now."

A Baptist society was organized at Benson, Vt., October 1, 1796, and in March 5, 1797, a church was organized by this society. Mr. Durfee was a leading and active member in the society and church (see vol. 3, Vermont Historical Magazine).

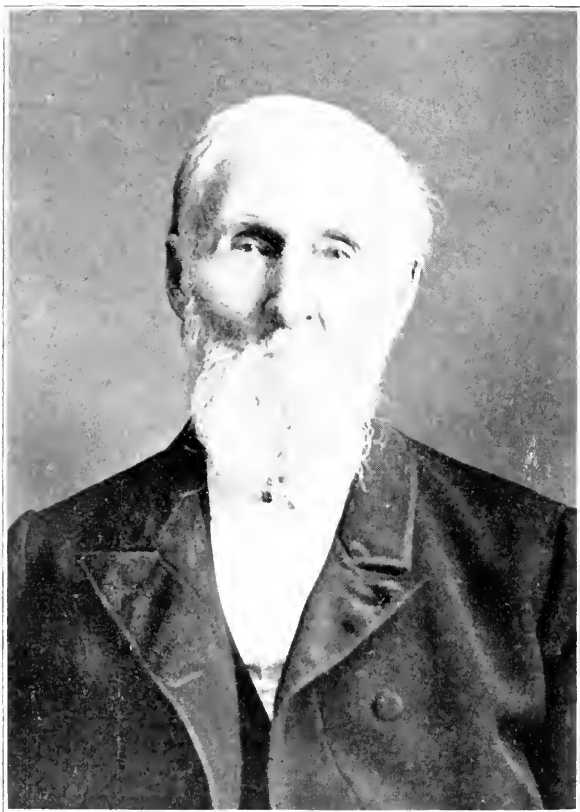

Walter Durfee's record as a Revolutionary soldier is as follows :

He enlisted at Freetown, Mass., and served in the Massachusetts line. Was on the rolls of Capt. Caleb Carr's Co., of Col. Wm. Richmond's regiment, from April 13, 1776, to July 1, 1776, and was paid for two months and seventeen days' service. This company has record of being in camp, at Newport, R. I., October 10, 1776, and was paid there at that time. On page 71, vol. 2, State House Records, at Providence, R. I., it is shown that for service in Capt. Sayers' Co., 1st Co. of Col. Elliott's regiment, that he was entitled to £20 as bounty. While living in Rutland Co., Vt., he applied for a pension, which was granted to date from March 4, 1831.

Under date of July 7, 1896, the Commissioner of Pensions has stated as follows :

"* * He made application for pension July 9, 1832, at which time he was residing in Rutland, Vt., and eighty years of age, and his pension was allowed for two years' actual service as a private in Massachusetts troops Revolutionary War. A part of the time he served under Capt. Carr and Col. Richmond. He enlisted at Freetown. His widow, Anna, made application and received a pension for the service of her husband as above set forth.

"I welcome one and welcome all,
Hope you'll enjoy this pleasant call;
My age I now will tell to you,
This day I am just ninety-two."

"Had I my life again to live,
All I possess I'd freely give;
I'd improve the moments as they passed,
In hopes of gaining heaven at last."

Myra Durfee, while in service in Cornwall, Vt., came on a visit about 1835 or '40 to her sister Abigail, who lived at Ripton, a distance of 9 miles, returned by the way of Middlebury, was last seen crossing a bridge in a village and was never heard from afterwards. A long search was made for her without any tidings.

Benjamin Durfey, who has the following service record as a soldier during the war of the Revolution, was no doubt the son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Downing) Durfee. He enlisted as a private July 5, 1780, to serve 6 months in Capt. Lemuel Clift's Co. of the 4th Connecticut Regiment, and was discharged December 10, 1780. He enlisted a second time September 1, 1781, as a private in Capt. Walker's Co., 3d Connecticut Continental Regiment; paid on pay roll for services from January 1, 1781, to December 31, 1781; last mustered May 26, 1783. He enlisted a third time as a private in the 6th Co. of Col. Heman Swift's Connecticut Regiment, June 30, 1783; last mustered October 14, 1783.

Mr. Durfee's grandson, Richard T. Durfee, of 75 Rockland street, New Bedford, Mass., has furnished information to the writer about his ancestors, and in one of his letters he states that his grandfather was a custom house officer, and mentions also an interest in the French Spoliation Claims ; naming the ship "Vigilant" as taken with cargo ; giving names of crew as Warren Howland, Robert Bennett, Albert Vincent, and Benjamin Sisson as master.

Thomas (413), son of Richard, born 1801, went from home, when ten years old, and probably followed the sea. He entered the Navy, and was with Commodore Perry in the U. S. S. "Mississippi" when he carried the treaty to Japan, and was quartermaster of the vessel.

The official register of the U. S. (Blue Book) shows that he was an assistant keeper of the Light House on Craney Island, near Norfolk, Va., September 30, 1863. Appointed from Virginia ; compensation $300 per annum. No record has been given of his being married.

Their children were :

Sarah Durfee (180), sister of Mary (178), died probably in 1834. Her will, dated September 27, 1824, was recorded at Portsmouth, R. 421.—6th. Thomas, born May 8, 1797.

Mr. Durfee married a second time at Cannonsville, N. Y., to Mrs. ELIZABETH CANNON, of Cannonsville, N. Y.; born in 1761; died in Cannonsville, N. Y., July 26, 1840. They had no children.

In the History of Delaware Co., N. Y., the following account of the settlement of James Durfee is recorded :

"James Durfee came from Rhode Island in 1788 to Kortright, and stayed three years and then removed to Tompkins, first to the 'Slow and Easy' Mill, two miles below the 'city,' and afterwards to Cannonsville. He had one son, Thomas Durfee, who became a Baptist preacher and whose long life closed in 1879."

From letters received from descendants of Mr. Durfee it is shown that his son Stephen, when he came to be a man, went from home to Cairo, Green Co., N. Y., and died there probably unmarried.

He sold the land given him in the town of Portsmouth, R. I., through the will of his father for $675.00 to his brother Thomas, of Portsmouth, R. I., in 1810. He transferred his mortgage on the land in 1812 to Bateman Munroe, his brother-in-law, for $500.00. Those who witnessed transfer were Thomas Cory, Jr., and Sarah Durfee.

It is presumed that the record of Mr. Munro's second wife as "Mrs. Elizabeth Durfee" is an error, and it is believed that she was a sister of his first wife—this, however, is based on conjecture, and the fact that the records at Bristol, R. I., of the period of this marriage often show the names of maiden ladies with Mrs. written before the given name.

The following copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Pensions, dated April 23, 1895, gives a brief account of his military record :

"SIR : In reply to your request for a statement of the military history of Thomas Durfee, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, you will find below the desired information as contained in his (or his widow's) application for pension on file in this Bureau.

"During the Revolutionary War he resided in the town of Tiverton, R. John Cook. His widow's pension was allowed for his actual services as a private for 9 months, and as an ensign for 12 months.

His grandson, Thomas Durfee, published a memoir of his father (at the request of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society) in 1881, in which he mentions his grandfather as follows:

"He seems to have acquired, without any special advantages, a very good education, and after some desultory study of the law he established himself in Tiverton as a lawyer." "Though not a man of learning he had some good books in law and literature which he carefully read and digested." "He was grave, dignified, and thoughtful."

"His wife was impressionable, affectionate, and devout, and sympathized in her religious views with the Quakers, though not of their sect. At the time of the birth of their son Job they were living on the Fall River road, about two miles north of the Stone Bridge; soon afterwards the family removed to the home on Tiverton Heights, near Fort Barton" (probably about 1793, as his son was known to have said he was three years old at the time), "where he resided until his death, and both are buried in the family burial lot east of the home."

Through the kindly interest of Mr. Melvin Durfee Osband, of Grand Rapids, Mich., the following record of the Osband and Osborn family has been provided for record here.

"The Osband name is probably a variation of the name Osborn which was severed from the more common family name at a time and under conditions that cannot now be traced. The name in our family genealogy has not been traced beyond William Osband, who was born August 16, 1729. It is assumed that he was born in Newport, R. I., because he came from that place when a boy and lived during his minority with Samuel Hicks, of Tiverton. He spelled his name Osband, as appears by his autograph affixed to a deed of conveyance of land, which deed is now (or was recently) in the possession of the family of the late Judge Joseph Osborn, of Tiverton. Of his children Weaver alone spelled his name Osband, the rest spelled it Osborn.

I.—William Osband, died in Tiverton, R. I., October 29, 1810. He was married in Tiverton, May 28, 1752, to Elizabeth Shrieve, of Tiverton; daughter of William Shrieve; she died in Tiverton, about 1814.

Their children were:

II.—1st. Wilson Osborn, born June 3, 1753; died about 1757.

III.—2d. Weaver Osband, born April 17, 1756.

IV.—3d. Elizabeth Osborn, born June 8, 1758.

V.—4th. Patience Osborn, born July 17, 1761; died quite young.

VI.—5th. Thomas Osborn, born March 31, 1766.

VII.—6th. William Osborn, born July 18, 1769.

Weaver, Thomas and William married Durfee girls. The descendants of William died without issue, while the descendants of Weaver, are all known by the surname Osband. The descendants of Thomas, who married Ann Durfee, are all surnamed Osborn, and claim a common ancestry with the Durfees. The record of the descendants of William and Thomas will be found in the numerical order of their wives in this genealogy.

Weaver Osband (whose descendants will immediately follow) worked on his father's farm, in Tiverton, till 20 years of age, when he enlisted in the Revolutionary army for a definite time; his term of service expired and he was discharged one day before the battle of Rhode Island. He ran a boat on the Seaconnet river in aid of the patriot army. During the battle and the next day he re-enlisted for "during the war," and served till honorably discharged. The record of his services have not been found yet in original documents, but on page 143, Vol. 9, Rhode Island Colonial Records, it is recorded that at the session of the General Assembly of Rhode Island, at Providence, July 17, 1780, Weaver Osborn was appointed ensign of Captain Devol's 2d Company of Tiverton, of the 2d Battalion of Militia of Newport county.

The gun he carried during the war came into the possession of his son-in-law, Rev. Marcus Swift, and by him was brought to Michigan, in 1825. It was a heavy flint-lock musket, after the style of those times. The writer of this has seen it, handled it, loaded it, and fired it. It was burned with the house of its owner in 1843. Mr. Osband never applied for a pension. He said he fought for his country, not for a pension.

"After the war Mr. Osband followed fowling and fishing, along the New England coast, and on the Newfoundland banks, for some years. After his marriage he settled down to farming, in Tiverton."

In the summer of 1791 he emigrated with the Durfee colony to Palmyra, Wayne Co., N. Y., and the remainder of his life he spent on his farm.

XXV.—WILLIAM MERRITT OSBAND, born June 25, 1836.

Mr. Osband was six months old when the family removed to Palmyra. His education, like that of his brothers and sisters, was limited by the conditions of pioneer life. During his minority he helped develop his father's farm; In after years he adopted preaching as his profession, and for many years and until death he served the Genesee Conference as Circuit Rider or Station Preacher. In the early 30's he located his family on a farm in Arcadia, Wayne Co., N. Y., and from this home he subsequently rode forth on his Gospel mission."

It is said of him that he was an excellent man, and that his life harmonized with his preaching. In person he was small of stature, and weighed less than 130 pounds.

Y., son of General John and ——— (Sawyer) Swift (Rev. soldier of Connecticut, settled in Palmyra, N. Y., 1789; Bvt. Brig.-Gen'l N. Y. Vols.; killed near Niagara Falls, in Canada, 1814); born in Palmyra, N. Y., June 23, 1793; died in Northville, Wayne Co., Mich., February 19, 1865.

f.—6th. JOHN MARCUS SWIFT, born February 11, 1832.

Rev. Marcus Swift, the husband of Anna Osband, began to preach in the M. E. Church in his early manhood in Eastern Michigan, where the family removed in 1825. He became a power in the church, and it was said of him that he was the instrument of more conversions, and that he organized more churches, than perhaps any other man of those times in Michigan.

In 1841, during the anti-slavery contest, Mr. Swift, from the conviction that his church in its acts and teaching sympathized with slavery, and thereby became morally responsible for its existence, led a secession from its ranks, that included a large portion of the membership of the Michigan church.

His after life was spent in the Wesleyan Methodist connection, that grew out of this secession. Mr. Swift was quite free from sectarianism; he looked to a man's life rather than his creed to find his religion. Near the close of his life he said: "The great principles for which I have labored and fought, amid reverses and persecutions, are now the ruling sentiments of the people. I have lived in a glorious age, and my eyes have seen the powers of darkness give way before the coming of the glorious reign of liberty." After his death a friend, in a letter to his son, said: "Your father and I differed in politics and religion, but I knew him well throughout the formative years of church and State in Michigan; and I wish to say to you, as I have said repeatedly during his life, that no man, living or dead, has done so much for Eastern Michigan in her civil, social, educational and religious well-being and character, as did Marcus Swift."

In all his labors his wife proved herself to be a worthy assistant. She labored unceasingly, and patiently shared with him the hardships of pioneer life for 16 years, struggling with poverty and privation, till her physical strength became exhausted. She reared a family of five children, all of whom in after years shed honor upon her name and character. She laid her burdens down before she reached her 49th natal day.

The following personal sketches of individuals of the Swift family were overlooked in copying, and are placed here to save labor of rewriting. These should have followed the record of each family:

Osband D. Swift (a 1st). Useful labor is worthy of respect, however humble. The pioneer not only performs useful labor, but his labor in its results descends to bless succeeding generations; though he be forgotten by those who come after him, he is still an industrial hero and a benefactor of his race. The pioneers of Nankin have no pre-eminence over the great pioneer armies in the world's history, yet with them they are equally worthy of a place among the world's royal stock.

The subject of our sketch was one of these; before his 13th birthday he was busy with ax in hand, battling with the Michigan forests, trying to develop a farm in their stead. His education was confined principally to his physical system, supplemented by a very meager attendance on the crude public schools of his locality.

In his after years he became a brickmaker and a brick-mason. He was a lover of music, and the winter evenings of his early manhood were given to teaching vocal music to classes in his vicinity. His life was one of hard, unremitting physical labor. He was intelligent, genial in society, an enduring friend, and possessed a character of undoubted integrity. He was not fortunate in business, and his domestic life was saddened by the loss of two wives and four children. He was stalwart in person, being six feet tall and very muscular. He died in his 45th year, loved and mourned.

George W. Swift (c 3d) was in his 9th year when he first heard the wolves howl in the Michigan woods. He worked hard in developing his father's farm, while his school opportunities were few. His business through life was miscellaneous. He was a farmer, carpenter and joiner, contractor and builder, merchant, and he filled many places of public trust with credit. In early life he developed a superior ability as a public speaker, and he made good use of this in the anti-slavery discussions that became prominent about the time that he approached manhood. He was intelligent and able in argument, and the advocates of human freedom found in him an able champion. On this subject he was fearless and valiant. On the temperance platform also, his addresses were numbered by the hundreds. His public positions were State Librarian, two years, U. S. Consul at Windsor, Canada, four years under President Grant, and member of the State Legislature, two terms, besides numerous smaller positions. His social faculties were of a high order. There were few who did not covet his society. He was dignified, pleasant, easy of approach, discussed current topics intelligently, and with a tender regard for the feelings of all present.

Orson R. Swift (d 4th) was licensed to preach by the Wesleyan Methodists, at the age of 21 years. He was fluent in speech and his manner was attractive. He threw his whole soul into his work; his emotional nature was very strong and impelled him to efforts beyond his strength; after preaching five years his health failed and he began the study of medicine. He practiced in his profession quite successfully the remainder of his life. But he never recovered from the terrible effects his public speaking had wrought upon his health, and before he reached 35 years of age he passed over to the Beyond from his father's house.

John M. Swift, M. D. (f 6th), after a hard struggle in early life to secure an education, succeeded in graduating from a medical college at the age of 22 years. He located at Northville, a village in Wayne Co., Mich. His energy and skill has won for him honors and an enviable reputation as a man and as a physician. He is prominent in the society of his locality, with few if any superiors.

He speaks well in public ; he served one term in the legislature and declined a renomination. Beside his first college degree he has been honored by a degree from the Rush Medical College, of Chicago. He was an honorary member of the Sydenham Medical Society, of London, England, besides holding a membership in many other medical societies, and a Councillor of the Detroit Medical College. He is a lecturer of ability and on occasions preaches lay sermons as supply in vacant pulpits. His religious life is earnest, and his theology broad and liberal.

He has given much attention to music, and is himself a fine singer. In March, 1895, Dr. Swift suffered a paralytic stroke, since which time his health has been very feeble.

XI.—OSBAND, WILLIAM (Weaver 2d, William 1st). Son of Weaver and Hannah (Durfee) Osband ; born in Palmyra, N. Y., June 1, 1796 ; died in Nankin, Mich., November 24, 1861 ; married in Palmyra, N. Y., April, 1820, to MARTHA REEVES, of Palmyra, N. Y., daughter of Daniel and Mary Bowers Reeves ; born in West Hampton, Long Island, N. Y., in 1798 ; died in Nankin, Mich., November 17, 1848.

Their children were :

XXVI.—1st. WILLIAM HENRY OSBAND, born December 12, 1820.

XXVII.—2d. MELVIN DURFEE OSBAND, born April 22, 1824.

XXVIII.—3d. LUTHER REEVES OSBAND, born March 14, 1826.

XXIX.—4th. WILSON GRANT OSBAND, born November 24, 1827 ; died October 30, 1848.

XXX.—5th. EDGAR EMMET OSBAND, born February 21, 1832.

XXXI.—6th. EDWIN REEVES OSBAND, born March 20, 1836.

Mr. Osband labored on his father's farm till his majority, when he served an apprenticeship with a carpenter and joiner. He worked at that trade till October, 1825, when he and his family, together with the family of his sister, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Swift, left their ancestral homes and removed to Nankin, Mich. Nankin then consisted of a vast unbroken wilderness of heavy timbered land. In subsequent years Mr. Osband succeeded making a productive farm of his timbered waste, but effort necessary to produce this result secured to him a shattered constitution, and to his wife an early grave. Mr. Osband was a born mechanic, and this aided him to adapt himself to the necessities of his environment, for in addition to his trade of carpenter and joiner he, as occasion required, became a cooper, gunsmith, bricklayer, plasterer, shoemaker, coffin maker, and general tool maker. His life was pure and helpful. He not only had the reputation, but possessed the character of uprightness, industry, honesty and integrity. He was a temperate man from boyhood. He was an abolitionist at a time when such sentiments ostracised men from society. As a churchman he belonged to the M. E. Church till its position on slavery drove him from it, after which he was a Wesleyan Methodist till his death. In politics he was a Whig, as were all his brothers. After 1848 he cast his influence with the Free Soil and Republican parties. He held some local offices, but always with reluctance. In his later years he lived in the enjoyment of a competence; as the result of a life of industry and economy.

The children of William Osband grew to manhood on the farm, and after their majority all became carpenters and joiners, and all except the second have made farming and mechanical labors the principal business of their lives. Like all pioneer boys their school education was limited by the necessities of their environment. They have all lived in the quiet of private life, and of them there is little to write. They have maintained a reputation for honesty, intelligence, industry, and respectability, and have always received the respect and confidence of their neighbors; while none of them have become wealthy, all have accumulated enough of this world's goods to relieve them from fear of want, at least for the near future.

In their youth they each united with the Christian church, and they have ever since received Christian recognition from their associates in life. They have all led lives of sobriety, and in them the saloon and its work have ever found uncompromising enemies. All except Wilson G. and Edwin R. yet live, and their ages at their next birthday will range from 66 to 77 years (1898).

Mr. Osband adopted preaching as his profession at an early age. In the work assigned him by the General Conference, he wielded a power in the pulpit that few could equal. It was told of him that a reformation accompanied his preaching wherever he went. His pulpit efforts were characterized by great enthusiasm, which taxed his physical energies to such an extent that his health broke down, and during the last dozen or more years of his life he was a confirmed invalid.

"* * * The address of welcome was as follows" (by M. D. Osband):

"MY DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER:

"We, a few of your friends, have met to celebrate with you an event that occurred fifty years ago. None can now remember that event but those wearing gray hairs, and few that graced that occasion are with us now. Fifty years ago! As our memory glances back to it it doesn't seem long. But in tracing the events of the intervening years as you traced them, it has taken a half century to compass it. The year 1848 is rich in historic events. Few years in the world's history have left a record of greater commotion. Unrest and insurrection seemed to permeate the very atmosphere like a mental contagion. All Europe was trodden by hostile armies. Every crowned head on the continent was anxious for its own safety. The fabric of political society seemed broken up. The pent-up fires of human freedom were bursting forth with volcanic fury. Louis Philippe, of France, dropped his crown and fled to England, followed by the execrations of his people. Emperor Ferdinand, of Austria, fled his country and resigned crown. Pius IX, the religious despot, holding down the rickety chair of St. Peter at Rome, was confronted by his infuriated people and fled to Gaeta for safety. The German states were on the verge of revolution, while Hungary was one boiling, bubbling, seething arena of insurrection. The submerged classes of Europe were intensely aroused, and in desperation striving to secure those rights which regal governments had wrested from them. The days of kingly governments seemed to have been numbered.

"In our own country 1848 was also a year of unrest. This was the last year of President Polk's administration. The Mexican war had not yet closed, and our army still occupied the Mexican capital. Our country was then dominated by the slave power, and a more cruel despot never governed any people. Both of the great political parties were its subservient tools, and both bowed before its altars.

"But the events following this war awakened intense antagonisms at the North that culminated during the next fifteen years in our terrible civil war and the destruction of slavery forever.

"But we are not here to celebrate war, nor to wave palms of victory over fallen foes. Ours is a much pleasanter task.

"On receipt of those elegant golden wedding bells, entwined by a sprig of olive blossoms, placed upon your card of invitation to this festival, I was reminded that domestic events also make history. And surely the year 1848 gave birth to one event that savors more of peace than of war, when on Wednesday, March 29, William Henry Osband, of Nankin, aged 27 years, was married to Sarah Melissa Glass, aged 17 years, at the residence of her brother, Zenas Glass, of Livonia. With some of us the memory of that event remains fresh. It was a beautiful spring day. The sun shone warm and bright overhead. But, oh, what roads! You placed a big tax on the loyalty of your friends when you asked them to wade through the miles of almost impassable mud just to see you married. You passed over the same roads yourselves the next day in going to the party given by our father in honor of the occasion. But it is quite supposable that the peculiar excitement of the time rendered you quite oblivious of everything as vulgar as muddy roads, and that you cannot now recall that they were not in the best condition. Life to you then looked beautiful, grand and hopeful. Your later experiences, however, have taught you that life's seas are beset with adverse storms, and that only brave hearts and brawny muscles can safely ride through them. You have proved that it is sometimes possible to conquer in the battles of life and to gather strength while doing it.

"You have endured sickness, discouragements, disappointments and losses. You have suffered bereavements that left wounds that can never be healed till you pass over to join the loved ones that escaped from your embrace years ago. Little Norman Henry came to your embrace and stayed with you but thirty-seven days, but long enough to enlist your affections; then his little life passed out.

"More recently came that more terrible blow, when Anna Rowena breathed her last and passed to the unknown. I cannot measure parental love, neither will I attempt to describe the deep sorrow when a loved child departs.

"She had received your care and reciprocated your affections twenty-six years. She was bright, loving, entertaining, and was happily married. Then Mary passed away, in whom you shared your son's sorrow. * * * You were both educated in the religion of the Bible. You can both point back to the pure precepts and examples of your christian parents. In early life you each accepted the religion of your fathers, and enlisted under the banner of Christ. Your subsequent lives have been replete with efforts to exemplify His teachings. Your good works, exemplary lives, and faithful service give us assurance that the characters you have formed, and will by and by take with you over to the other side, will be ample passports to the better life. * * *

"As I glance over this little group of friends, I find but few that graced the former gathering. But a few weeks after your marriage, your brother, James, passed away.

MELVIN D. OSBAND.

A bright young man of good character and high aspirations. A year had not passed ere our mother, and brother Wilson, also passed to the spirit world. Each succeeding year has borne from your circle some loved one whose society you cherished. Father Glass, brother and sister Clisby, brother Zenas and Roswell are gone. Our father and brother Edwin are no longer with us. Our uncle, Marcus Swift, and his five children, and our old neighbors are all gone. You were in business when you erected your first domicile. Your three partners and their wives have all passed to the great Beyond, and you alone are left." * * *

"But the truer life draws nigher—every year,
And its morning star climbs higher—every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burdens lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter—every year."

XLV.—2d. NELLIE ELIZA OSBAND, born May 13, 1865.

Mr. Osband became crippled in his youth by the dislocation of his hip joint, the bones of which were never adjusted. In his later years this disabled him for physical labor. Nevertheless, in his early manhood, he worked several years at his trade. He taught school several terms, did clerical work in various capacities many years, and once engaged in mercantile pursuits for a few years.

In early life he contracted a love for books and study, which in spite of adverse conditions have been continued through life. This has given him an ease in expressing his ideas by the pen, which he has in his later years by essays contributed to literary societies by occasional newspaper articles, and several articles which have been published in the "Collections of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical Society." He has also done much work in his family genealogy. His wife died in 1892, in Lansing, Mich., which had for many years been their home. Since then he has found a home with his daughter, Mrs. Frank A. Baldwin, at Grand Rapids, Mich.

* * * * *

“To show, concretely, the changes which have been made in the municipal administration and jurisdiction of a portion of the territory to which his address was devoted, Mr. Brayton cited the case of the late Hon. Weaver

Osborn, who was born in Tiverton, and also resided within the original territorial limits of that town; who for 40 years lived in the house in which he died; who, during that time, was a member of the Town Council of Tiverton, also of the Town Council of the town of Fall River, R. I., which latter town he represented in the General Assembly of Rhode Island (both branches); who was an Alderman of the city of Fall River, and represented that city and his Senatorial District in both branches of the Massachusetts Legislature."

XXXI.—3d. JAMES EDWARD OSBORN, born January 24, 1856.

"When Mr. James M. Osborn was eleven years old his father died; for six years thereafter he remained with his mother on the farm, availing himself of such common-school advantages for education as were given by the town schools, after which he learned the blacksmith's trade of his brother Weaver, staying with him three years; returning to the farm at the age of twenty, he tried seine-fishing, but without success. He then resumed the trade of blacksmithing in Providence R. I., and worked in other places until 1845, when he came to Fall River, Mass., and obtained employment of John Kilborn, with whom he remained until Mr. Kilborn's death, which occurred about eighteen months after he began to work for him. Soon after Mr. Kilborn's death his shop was taken by Kilborn and Lincoln, who employed Mr. Osborn until 1855. In February of that year he joined his brother Weaver in the purchase of a shop on Bedford St. in Fall River, and commenced business under the firm title of W. and J. M. Osborn. In 1859 the incentive of making Fall River a leading manufacturing center of the State was given to the live business men of the city, and W. and J. M. Osborn became interested in and helped build the Union Mill. They afterwards were identified with the Granite Mill, and in 1867 invested largely in the Merchants Manfg Co., in which corporation Mr. Osborn was a director. With others they were interested in the erection of the Stafford Mills.

"In 1871, Mr. Osborn was elected director and treasurer of the Slade Mills, and devoted himself to the duties of that office; also superintended the building of the mill. The next corporation in which the brothers were interested in was the Osborn Mill. Their copartnership ceased in 1880. They were interested in the Union Belt Co., Fall River Bobbin Mills, Montaup Mills, and other corporations. Mr. Osborn was a director in the Globe Yarn Mill, and Merchants Manfg. Co., a trustee of the Fall River Five Cent Savings Bank; in politics, a Whig and a Republican."

"He had been from early life a temperance worker in connection with the Order of Sons of Temperance. He has never used tobacco or liquor; has been a member of the city government, serving in both branches. He and his wife have been connected with the 2d Baptist Church of this city as members for many years; a part of the time he was chairman of the committee of the society."

"He erected a pleasant residence in 1859, which has been his home; to those about him his affability and kindly ways won for him true respect, and unfailing friends." (The principal part of the above was copied from the "History of Bristol Co., Mass.")

The home of Ichabod and Sarah (Durfee) Manchester after their marriage was probably in Tiverton, R. I., for a few years; and about 1803 they removed to Madison, Madison Co., N. Y. Mr. Manchester was a carpenter, but in later years he was a farmer. Mrs. Dickerson, a granddaughter, who was a resident of Freedom, Ills., states in her letter of October 7, 1896, that her mother (Elizabeth Manchester) and father (Thomas Brownell) were both born in the State of New York, and from this it is inferred that the family were there previous to 1804.

The Durfee ancestors of Mrs. Manchester were Quakers, but few of their descendants retained that faith. In politics Mr. Manchester was a Democrat. The records of the marriages of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Manchester and their descendants were obtained through letters received from their grandchildren, and are as follows, viz :

In the spring of 1835, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Manchester removed from Madison, N. Y., to Seneca, Mich., where they bought a farm. They were among those who first settled there. The land about them was mostly covered with woods. Mr. Manchester built a log house and moved in before there were doors or windows in it.

Their daughter, Mrs. JULIA C. (MANCHESTER) RICHMOND, states in her letter that she remembers hearing her parents tell of the wolves that howled in the forests during the night. Soon after the birth of Julia, her mother failed in health. In compliance with the advice of the family physician they returned to Madison, N. Y., intending to return to Michigan, when Mrs. Manchester had regained her health ; but they yielded to the earnest desire of their parents and settled on a place adjoining them. Joseph Manchester, her father, was an officer in Col. Bowen's Rhode Island regiment throughout the Revolutionary War. He was in the ranks without furlough from beginning to the end of the war, participated in many of its battles, and passed the winter at Valley Forge. Mrs. Van Vleck used to tell of his description of the battle of Monmouth, as she heard it from his own lips, and how, on that hot summer's day, many an American soldier quenching his thirst, after the fierce fighting and the hard march, died from the excessive draught of water, after escaping the bullets of the enemy. She had a drinking cup that he carried through the war. A Bible, given to him by Col. Bowen, has been lost trace of. (From Des Moines "Leader," March 28, 1899.)

The following record of the school committee of Fall River, Mass., was published in one of their annual reports :

“MARY BRAYTON YOUNG.”

“The announcement of the death of Mrs. Mary Brayton Young has been received by the school committee of this city with sincere sorrow. Few who pass from our sight leave a more beautiful or lasting influence, an influence that must be felt, not only in this community, but throughout the world ; for the works of all the good radiate in ever widening circles to every corner of the universe.”

“Her gentle manner, loving, unselfish disposition, generous, kindly, and sympathetic nature, her quiet, unostentatious life, impressed deeply all who came in contact with her.”

“She has laid her hand in blessing upon our people in many silent but helpful ways. Her interest in the cause of education, which began when she herself was a teacher in our public schools, continued through her long and useful life, and culminated in the greatest educational benefaction a city ever received.”

“In the splendid gift of the B. M. C. Durfee High School building, she has blessed not only the present generation, but all who are to come. No one can wholly calculate the advantages of educational privileges in and upon a community. In so nobly perpetuating the memory of one who was most precious to her mother heart, she has done that which will ever keep her own memory fresh and fragrant.”

“Language is inadequate to express our admiration, esteem, and affection for this sincere friend of humanity whose loss we deplore to-day.”

“We cannot forget her. Her virtues, her sincerity, her faithfulness, modesty, and true womanliness, her tender sympathy, her devotion to duty, her strict adherence to lofty principle, all her amiable and lovable qualities, endear her to our hearts.” * * *.

"A good memory is the best monument; a noble life is the best epitaph."

A MOTHER'S MEMORIAL TO HER SON.

"The B. M. C. Durfee High School Building of Fall River, Mass., was erected in memory of BRADFORD MATTHEW CHALONER DURFEE, and given to the city of Fall River by his mother, Mrs. MARY B. YOUNG."

"Mr. Durfee during his lifetime had been interested in educational matters, and before his death had expressed a wish that more adequate provision might be made for the advanced education of the youth of his native city. In conformity to this wish his mother, on February 5, 1883, sent a communication to the City Council in which she offered to erect and furnish at her own expense a high school; to provide philosophical, mechanical, and chemical apparatus, and to give the city in trust $50,000, the income of which was to be devoted to the maintenance of the scientific and industrial departments."

"The site selected by Mrs. Young was an entire square, which, because of its eminence and central location, was the best in the city for a high school."

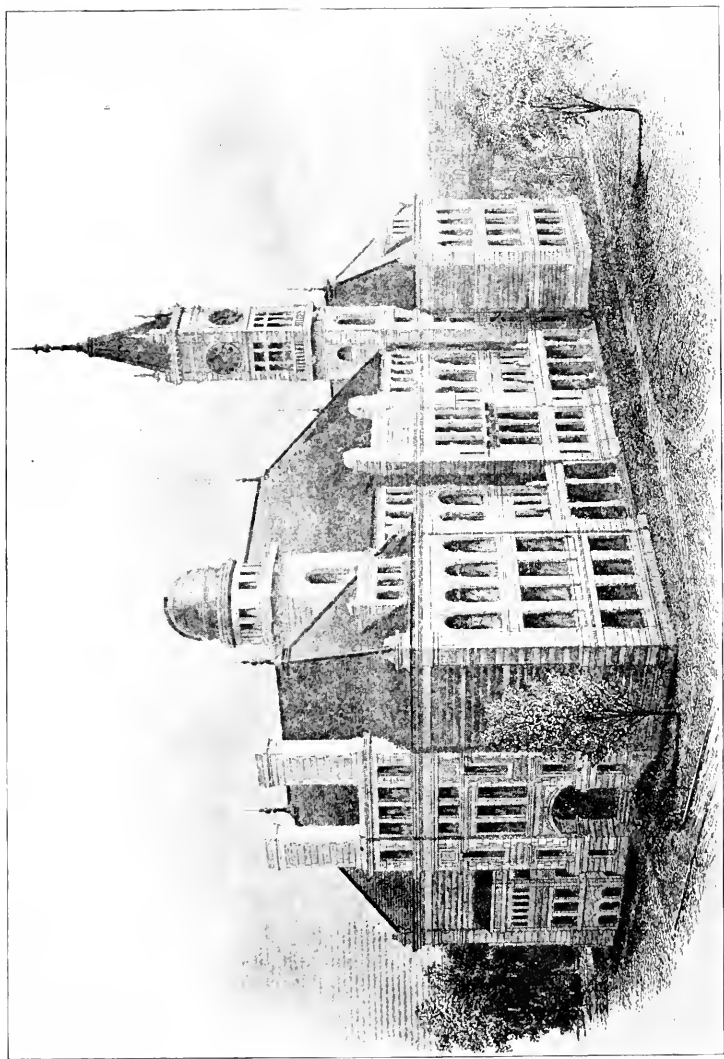

"Ground was broken August 13, 1883. During the fall the foundation was laid. On June 24, 1884, everything was in readiness for the laying of the corner-stone, and at 10 o'clock A. M. a few person, relatives of Mr. Durfee, assembled to witness the ceremony. Among those present were Mrs. Mary B. Young, Hon. John S. Brayton, Rev. Rosewell Hitchcock, D. D., LL. D., President of Union Theological Seminary, N. Y."

"Everything in readiness the mother of him whose name the edifice was to bear, placed in a cavity prepared in the southwest corner-stone of the building a copper box containing a copy of the deed, the different city papers, coins, etc."

"The building was dedicated June 15, 1887."

"In the south tower is a chime of 10 bells, on the largest is engraved:

"In memory of Bradford Matthew Chaloner Durfee, only child of Bradford and Mary (Brayton) Durfee; born in Fall River, June 15, 1843; died here September 13, 1872. This building was erected and this Chime of Bells placed in its tower and the same presented to the city of Fall River, A. D. 1887."

B. M. C. DURFEE HIGH SCHOOL, FALL RIVER, MASS.

(The above is from the printed report of the School Board of the city of Fall River.)

It has been the practice for years to ring (or strike) the bell 29 times at the hour of assembly of the students; the number of times indicating the number of years that Mr. Durfee lived. It is believed this custom was inaugurated by the janitor, who was a friend of Mr. Durfee's.

The school building and land on which it was erected is said to have cost between $700,000 and $800,000.

The following sketch of Bradford Matthew Chaloner Durfee may be found in Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography.

* * * * *

"He entered Yale, but failing health compelled him to leave college during his sophomore year, and he visited Europe in 1865, spending two and a half years in travel. On his return he assumed the management of his affairs, but his health compelled him to be largely on the sea, and he became an ardent yachtsman."

"For several years he made long cruises on his yacht 'Josephine,' visiting various countries on the Atlantic Ocean."

"Durfee Hall, one of the finest college dormitories in the United States, was the gift to Yale, which honored him with the degree of A. M., in 1871."

Major Bradford Durfee was a selectman of Fall River, Mass., from 1815 to 1833. He was interested in granite quarries and steamboat transportation.

The following is from a sketch of the military history of Fall River, Mass., by S. Angier Chace, printed in the Fall River "News," of March 24, 1897:

"In 1803 the military companies of Freetown had been reduced to three. The members of one of these companies resided in the territory which then became Fall River (or Troy). This company was therefore transferred on the State record to the town of Fall River. The field officers subsequently reported from Fall River (or Troy) were Majors Benjamin Brayton, 1803 ; Bradford Durfee, 1815 ; Isaac Borden, 1833."

"Lient. Colonels Joseph E. Reed, 1812 ; Richard Borden, 1823 ; William Sisson, 1833 ; William Winslow, 1835. Colonels Richard Borden, 1828 ; Philip R. Bennett, 1830 ; William Sisson, 1835. Brigadier General Philip R. Bennett, 1835."

"The names of the captains of the Fall River company transferred from Freetown were Benjamin Brayton, 1797 ; Robert Miller, 1804 ; Hezekiah Winslow, 1809 ; Job Terry, Jr., 1815 ; John Hathaway, 1823 ; Luther Winslow, 2d, 1829 ; William Winslow, 1832—promoted to lieut. colonel, 1835 ; Holder Wordell, 1835."

"About the time Fall River received the name of Troy, military duty was required by statute from all able-bodied white citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 years. Some idea of the relative number of the population in the towns around us at that time can be arrived at by comparing the military companies of each town. Dighton had three companies, Berkley two, Freetown two, Somerset and Troy one each ; Freetown and Berkley had double the number of Fall River."

I.—CHARLES DUFFEE WARREN, born February 8, 1815.

II.—JAMES H. WARREN, born November 9, 1817.

III.—THEODORE WARREN, born May 23, 1819.

IV.—SAMUEL S. WARREN, born March 26, 1821.

V.—LORING D. D. WARREN, born August 30, 1822.

The following history and record of the descendants of Minton and Lucretia (Durfee) Warren, was gleaned from a little booklet published by their son Theodore, and from letters received from him.

Mr. Minton Warren was a lineal descendant of Richard Warren, who came to America in the "Mayflower."

General James Warren, of the Revolution, was a descendant also of Richard Warren, through his son Nathaniel. Elizabeth Warren, one of the daughters of Richard married Richard Church, and became the mother of Captain Benjamin Church, "the hero of King Philip's War."

The family of Gamaliel Warren, the father of Minton, were renowned architects and builders; many noted edifices were planned and built by them. Minton accompanied his brother Russell, who was considered "one of the principal builders in New England." He was accounted an excellent workman, and went with his brother to the South many seasons, but on account of his health was not able to work at his trade in later years, his last employment being in the woolen mill of "J. and J. Eddy, in Fall River, Mass., where he took charge of their repairs."

The following was copied from the Fall River "News," of March 24, 1897, being a portion of the historical and military history of Fall River, Mass., and its vicinity previous to 1824, prepared by S. Angier Chase :

"The echo of the King Philip war had hardly died away before the country was involved in troubles of a different sort. It had been expected that the English government would do something to repair the heavy losses the colonies had sustained. But instead of sending relief a royal embassy arrived to collect duties and abridge colonial liberties.

"Benjamin Church is compared in history with Andrew Jackson for his genius and skill in conducting this Indian war. And, while he was feared in war as a terrible and triumphant enemy, he was finally much respected and beloved by the Indians themselves. He was born in Duxbury in 1630. After King Philip's war he settled in Bristol, which then with Warren, Tiverton and Little Compton was in the Plymouth colony. He soon removed to Tiverton, and was the purchaser of $26\frac{1}{2}$ of the 30 shares of the water power of the Pocasset purchase. * * * Here he erected a saw mill, a grist mill and a fulling mill. * * * Here he lived until about 1714, when he sold his interests to Richard Borden, of Tiverton, and Joseph Borden, of Freetown, and removed to Little Compton, where he died and was buried. On his gravestone was placed the following inscription :

"Here lies interred the body of the
Hon. Col. Benjamin Church, Esq., who departed this life January 17, 1717.

High in esteem among the great he stood,
His wisdom made him lovely, great and good ;
Though he be said to die, he will survive,
Through future time his memory shall live."

744.—1st. Sylvia Borden, born in September, 1844.

Mrs. Durfee married a second time, in Fall River, Mass., May 5, 1849, to JOHN S. HOLMES, a lawyer, who resided in Boston, Mass.

The following is copied from an article written by Mr. S. Angier Chace, and published in the Fall River "Evening News," March 24, 1897. Mr. Chace had been writing about the military company of Fall River in 1824, and then mentioned the celebration of the 4th of July, 1824:

"On the 4th of July, 1824, Miss Sylvia Borden presented a banner to this company, which had been made and prepared by the ladies of the village for that purpose. Miss Sylvia Borden was the second sister of Holder Borden, one of the few ever to be remembered and honored men who laid the foundation and started the enterprises of this now stirring and thriving city. * * *

"Miss Sylvia Borden became in 1826 Mrs. Joseph Durfee. The only child of this marriage now living is Mrs. William Carr.

"Mrs. Carr found during the past year among the carefully preserved effects of her mother, who died in 1840, a paper which, upon examination, proved to be the address in her own handwriting and bearing her signature which she had made at the presentation of the banner named.

"In 1823 there were in Troy three companies, the Troy Light Infantry, Captain Leonard Garfield, attached to the 5th regiment, second brigade, 5th division, the captain of which (Garfield) was commissioned August 11, 1823, and the company disbanded May 30, 1831. Captain Hathaway was commissioned captain of the Troy company November 22, 1823, which company was attached to the same regiment, brigade, and division, with that of Captain Garfield. There was also the 'Troy Rifles' in the same regiment, brigade, and division. The first captain was Philip R. Bennett, who was made colonel in 1830, and succeeded by Stephen Davol as captain of the company.

"The uniform of the Light Infantry company was white trousers and blue coats, with a white feather tipped with red, rising uprightly from the top of a tin plate ornamented on the front with a gilded spread eagle, and attached to the beaver hat of the soldier. The musicians wore red coats and red feathers. It was to this company Miss Sylvia Borden presented the banner on the 4th of July, 1824, standing on the steps of the mansion house, the residence of her mother and her stepfather, Major Durfee.

"The company was marched to and halted in front of the house and right-faced to the door. The young lady, then about 20 years of age, one of the most brilliant and beloved of the village, dressed entirely in white, with sparkling eyes and radiant face, stepped out of the door of the house with the flag in her hand and presented to Captain Garfield the standard, in the following appropriate address, the spirit and words of which would be an honor to any young lady to-day :

"Gentlemen: This is the anniversary of American freedom. On this day an altar was erected to Liberty, and the blessings of Heaven hallowed the offering. May the principles which produced our Independence long exist to defend it.

"Then turning to Capt. Garfield, she continued:

"Sir: The ladies of this village have the honor to present through you this standard to the Fall River Light Infantry. Accept it, sir, as a pledge of their esteem, both for your virtues and your valor, happy if they can give one motive to the brave, or add one spark to the glow of patriotic ardor which this day enkindles.

"Should our country ever again be invaded and you called upon to unfurl this banner in defense of her liberties, we are confident you will preserve it untarnished and pure; you will yield it to no other than the hand of Time, to which alone it can be gracefully surrendered.

"The Temples of your God, the tombs of your fathers, and the firesides of your families; your virtues as citizens and your courage as soldiers will gallantly defend.

"But may the courage on which we so confidently rely glow only in your bosoms. May the sound of war and the clash of arms never call it into action; and the peace and liberty of our country, like the smooth surface of the ocean, appear still more sublime when we know her greatness in the tempest."

SYLVIA BORDEN. Troy (Fall River).

* * * "The only names of the members of Captain Garfield's company at the time of the presentation that we have been able to find upon record, other than Captain Garfield, are Job B. French, Matthew C. Durfee, Benjamin Earl, Gardner D. Cook, Isaac Borden, Thomas D. Chaloner, Samuel Chace, George W. Gifford, Philip R. Bennett." * * *

"We have traced the loved presenter back to the 'Mayflower,' which is all that appears to us desirable."
* * *

"Richard Warren, of London, England, with two sons, came over in the 'Mayflower,' and landed at Plymouth, in 1620. * * * His name is carved upon the monument at Plymouth. * * * He was the father of seven children, all born in England. His wife and five daughters came in the ship 'Ann,' the second ship after the 'Mayflower,' and landed at Plymouth, in 1623. Land was set off to Richard Warren in Plymouth during that year and the good man then said, 'Please God, my five girls coming hither soon as I have a roof to shelter them shall become the mothers of soldiers and statesmen.'"

"Standish also says of him: 'A genial, honest gentleman of London, who has thrown his entire patrimony as well as his earnest soul into this enterprise.'

"His daughter, Elizabeth Warren, married Richard Church in 1635, a prominent man among the Pilgrims at Plymouth.

"Their eldest son was Benjamin Church, the hero of King Philip's war. * * * Their second son was named Joseph. The genealogy is as follows:

"Richard Warren, of the 'Mayflower,' in 1620. His daughter, Elizabeth Warren, married Richard Church in 1635. Their son, Joseph Church, married Mary Tucker, in 1665. Their daughter, Mary Church, married John Wood in 1688. Their daughter, Mary Wood, married Thomas Bailey in 1712. Their son, Thomas Bailey, Jr., married Mary Bennett in 1734. Their daughter, Phebe Bailey, married Isaac Hathaway in 1752. Their daughter, Mary Hathaway, married Thomas Borden in 1776. Their daughter, Phebe Borden, married Capt. George Borden in 1797. Their daughter, Sylvia Borden, born in 1803, presented the banner to the Troy Light Infantry Company in the village of Fall River, on the 4th of July, 1824."

Joseph Durfee, who married Sylvia Borden, was a carpenter and shipwright, engaged in the erection of the Massasoit mill. On the committee to build the Central Church; also interested in building the Wamassetta mills. Was at one time clerk for the Steamboat Co.

Durfee, did not marry. Previous to her death she resided at No. 78 Walden street, New Bedford, Mass.

The following sketch of his son, Zoheth Sherman Durfee, was copied from volume 2 of Appleton's Cyclopædia of American Biography :

"He was a manufacturer; born in Fall River, Mass., April 22, 1831; died in Providence, R. I., June 8, 1880.

"He was graduated at the New Bedford High School and finished at the Friends Academy in that city. On the completion of his studies he learned the blacksmith trade, after which he was associated with his father and uncle in the same business.

"In 1858 he was requested by a number of New Bedford capitalists to report on a new process for the making of steel direct from pig-iron, invented by Joseph Dixon.

"This led to a careful study of the entire subject of the manufacture of steel, and especially of the Bessemer process, then recently invented in England.

"He discovered that a patent substantially the same as Henry Bessemer's, but claiming priority over it, had been granted in the United States to William Kelley. After satisfying himself of the validity of this patent, he obtained control of it and visited England for the purpose of buying Bessemer's rights in the United States, but failed.

"Meanwhile he accumulated much information relative to the practical details of the manufacture of steel, and became convinced that the invention of Robert Mushet was an essential feature on both processes.

"On his return to the United States he organized a company of prominent iron makers for protecting and introducing into practical use the Kelley patent.

"In 1863 he again visited England, secured the control of the Mushet patent for the United States, and subsequently experimental steel works were erected by the Kelley process company in Wyandotte, Mich., where the ingots from which the first steel rails ever made in the United States were produced. During the following year Mr. Durfee, after a course of experiments, indicated the desirability of melting the charge in the cupola instead of in the reverberatory furnace. That feature prevails exclusively to-day, and demonstrates the correctness of Mr. Durfee's views.

"In 1866 the conflicting interests of the rival patentees were united in the Pneumatic Steel Association, of which he became secretary and treasurer, holding that office till his death.

"Later he was called to superintend the steel works at Troy, N. Y., but relinquished that appointment in 1868 and returned to New York, henceforth devoting his exclusive attention to the steel association, whose business he managed until a short time before his death.

"He patented various improvements in machinery for the manufacture of iron and steel, and made the first movement, and probably did more than any other single person toward introducing cheapened steel in the United States."

The following is in part from an article in the Fall River "News," of December 9, 1901, announcing the death of Walter C. Durfee :

"His education was very good, and he found his first business situation as assistant in Mr. Ainsworth's private commercial school. Later he entered the counting-house of Mr. Charles Potter, a Providence commission merchant by whose influence and connection with the Globe Print Works of Fall River he secured, at the age of 19, the position of book-keeper in that concern, and has since then resided continuously in this city. During the winter of 1836 he opened and conducted a private evening school. Four years later he became the manager of the Globe Print Works, having served as its book-keeper until that time with the exception of a few months in the office of the Fall River Iron Works. At the end of three years this connection was severed, owing to poor business conditions. After a year of office work with N. B. Borden & Co., wholesale grocers, he entered into co-partnership with Daniel Brown, as wholesale dealers in provisions and ship's stores, which lasted until 1859.

"In August, 1862, he became collector of internal revenue for the First District of Mass., by appointment of President Lincoln, and held this office until 1866. From this time he was engaged in business pursuits until 1871, when he became treasurer of the Wampanoag mills, serving 21 years, and finally retiring from active life in 1892. He was a trustee of the Border City Mfg. Co. in '79 and '80. President and director of the Metacomet National Bank, president and trustee of the Fall River Five Cents Savings Bank, director of the Wampanoag Mills, and in the Fall River Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Co.

"He was deeply interested in all that concerned the public welfare, and had a keen sense of the duty which every citizen owes to the community and country in which he lives. In his early manhood he was appointed lieutenant in a volunteer company, 10th Regiment Rhode Island militia, being on active duty in the Dorr rebellion, and ordered to Newport to protect persons and property.

"Twice he was representative to the Rhode Island legislature, and as such, chairman of the committee on convict petitions, and member of the committee which drafted the protest against the action of South Carolina in imprisoning negro sailors while in port. He served as alderman of Fall River four years; as assessor in the years 1870-'71, and was at one time fire ward. He was interested in all charities. * * *

"In 1862 he received a commission as justice of the peace, from the first war governor of Massachusetts, John A. Andrew. He held this office continuously, and the commission in effect at his death was signed by the latest war Governor, Roger Wolcott.

"His earliest religious associations, through his mother, were with the Friends, and he kept them ever in warm regard. But he was attracted, while still in his youth, to the Episcopal Church, and as a member of the parish of the Church of the Ascension his name may be found in the list of its active members from 1841, when he was elected a vestryman. For nearly 60 years he was delegate to the Diocesan Convention. His term as superintendent of the Sunday-school was extended. He was 45 years treasurer of the parish and senior warden during his last years, and at his death.

"In personal intercourse he had a ready wit and a sunny humor which freshened the life of others and gave a charm to companionship. With the increase of years he clearly recognized the uncertainty of life, and its duration as necessarily brief. He fully recognized his human imperfectness, but he was conscious of integrity and committed himself to One whose grace and mercy had been his support for many years. His end was peace, and his memory is blessed."

CIRCULAR LETTER

SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE FIRST VOLUME

OF

"The Descendants of Thomas Durfee, of Portsmouth, R. I."

COMPILED BY WILLIAM F. REED,

915 F STREET N.E., WASHINGTON, D. C.,

, 1902,

MY DEAR FRIEND:

I am pleased to announce that a sufficient number of copies of Vol. I of "The Descendants of Thomas Durfee, of Portsmouth, R. I.," have been subscribed for to cover cost of printing, binding, and delivering the volume to the subscribers.

The work will be printed by a large and successful book and job printing firm (Gibson Bros., Washington, D. C.), terms having been obtained that the subscriptions will cover.

You are requested to forward the amount of your subscription within the next thirty days. All money received will be placed in a separate bank account, and when enough has been deposited to cover contract to be made with Gibson Bros., the work of printing will commence.

Some time may elapse before delivery of the book, as the index will have to be made after printing is done; but the subscribers are assured that there will be no unnecessary delay in delivery.

Those choosing to add to the number of copies they have subscribed for are urged to do so, as the book will be in print but once. Efforts to increase the number of copies to be printed will be appreciated. The subscriber can get as many copies as he calls for now at $5.00 each. The price of copies printed, and unsold by subscription, will be $7.00 each.

Please send money, by Postal Money Order, or by Draft on banks in Washington, D. C., and New York City. Do not send checks on local banks.

Thanking you for your patient waiting, I remain,

Yours very truly,

WM. F. REED.
